Russia 3 Canada 2

Times News Services

MOSCOW — Russia took the lead today in its hockey series against Team Canada with a 3-2 victory in a rugged, hard-hitting game punctuated by several near fights.

Alexandrew Maltsev scored twice to lead the Soviets over a travel-weary Canadian squad that was delayed in its arrival here Monday.

The victory was the second for Russia in the eight-game series. Canada has one win and two games have been tied. The series finishes in Moscow with games Thursday at 9:30 a.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 8 a.m. (Victoria time).

Game officials, accustomed to the European style of play, appeared unable to keep up with the infractions by both clubs and several obvious penalties were ignored.

Russia's third goal was scored by defenceman Alexandr Gusev midway through the final period. He fired into an empty net after Canadian goaltender Gerry Cheevers was trapped out of position.

Veteran Gordie Howe and his son, Mark, who both play for Houston Aeros of the WHA, got the Canadian goals.

Maltzev scored the only goal of the first period when Canadian defenceman Paul Shmyr gave away the puck in his own zone to Vladimir Vikulov, who passed to Maltsev.

Gordie Howe tied it in the opening minutes of the second period. Mark dug the puck from the corner and steered it to Ralph Backstrom, who passed behind the goal. Howe tipped it past Soviet goalie Vladislav Tretiak from the side of the net.

Maltsev's second goal came on a power play at 15:04 of the second and put Russia ahead to stay. He got it while Johnny McKenzie was serving a hooking penalty.

Gusev's goal came at 11:48 of the third and clinched the outcome despite Mark Howe's scoring effort, his first of the series, with just under two minutes to play. Coach Billy Harris pulled Cheevers for an extra attacker in the closing seconds but Russia held on.

Canada appeared unable to put on any sustained pressure in the Russian end, allowing the Soviets time to set up long passing plays. Outside of a brief flurries by Team Canada, Russia had the game well under control.

DOW DIPS BELOW 600

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average, an indicaor of blue chip issue movement, fell about 14 points today, dipping below the 600 level to 593 for the first time since 1962.

The market recovered later, however, and was down only 6.73 at 601.14 by 2 p.m.

Barrett Rules Out Property Tax Leap

He said he will consider any recommendations from the legislature's taxation committee which may urge the government to "back off" on its plans to set up a new assessment system.

Provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright told the committee last week that chaos could erupt in B.C.'s property taxes next year if measures aren't taken this fall to ease the inequities caused by the government's move to have all property assessed at 100 per cent of its market value.

Premier Barrett said on a radio show the government is waiting for the report of the committee before it acts on the assessment issue and committee chairman Carl Liden (NDP-Delta) said the all-party group may recommend stop-gap measures to avoid problems next year.

The government introduced legislation last spring which would have all property assessed at 100 per cent of value. It then established the taxation committee to investigate the whole question of taxation with a view to insuring the new assessment system does not lead to inequitable tax payments.

Cabinet has granted B.C. municipalities $6.9 million to cover operating costs of the new provincial assessment authority this year.

The grant includes $5.7 million to pay the salaries of assessors and clerical staff until July 1 when the new authority took over all assessments in B.C.

Municipalities have continued to pay and house all local assessment officials but cabinet has now granted the money to reimburse the local authorities for all the costs.

The grant will pay for salaries, office expenses and facilities and other accommodation from July 1 to March 31, 1975.

More Rain On Way For City

The first rain since Sept. 8 fell on Victoria this morning; tonight and Wednesday could bring more of the same.

A total of .12 inches of rain fell at Victoria International Airport overnight, not exactly a deluge but still equal to the total rainfall for September.

Overcast skies and periods of rain are expected today and Wednesday, with temperatures near 60 in the daytime and overnight lows near 50.

September was not only the second driest on record, but also had 62 more hours of sunshine than the normal 196.9 hours for the month.

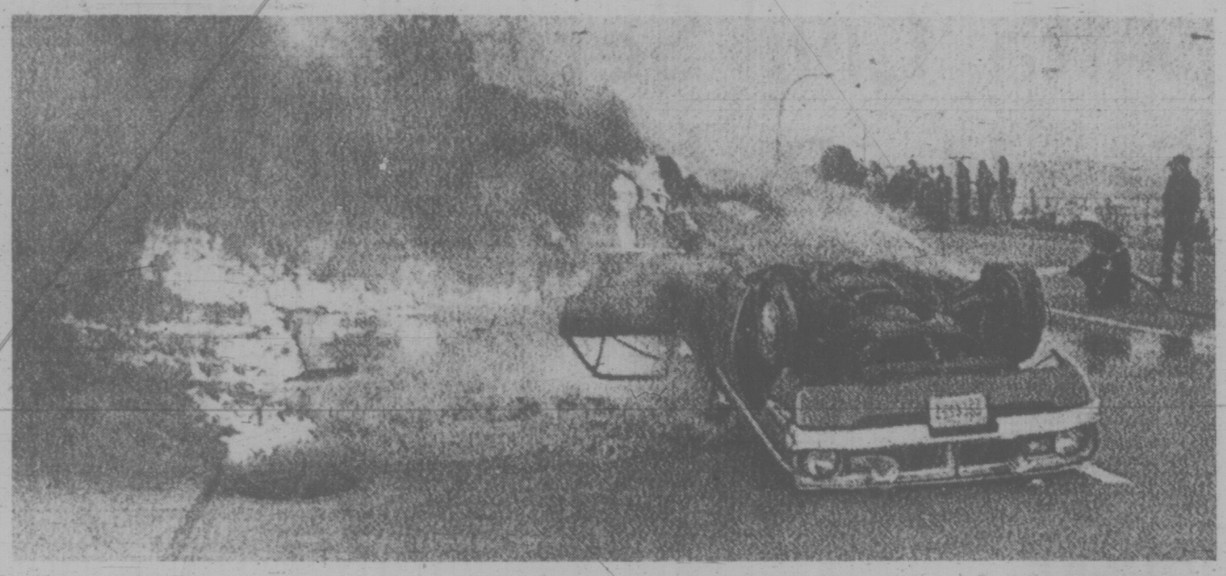
Mean temperature for September was 60.4 degrees, 3.3 higher than normal.

In northern B.C., late summer weather disappeared during the weekend into snowfalls of four to six inches and temperatures between 10 and 20 degrees.

In the Fort St. John region, a new low temperature was set Sunday, of 12 degrees, 11 degrees below the previous record.

Snowfall there broke the previous record for total September snowfall — 17.4 inches, compared with 12 inches recorded in 1972.

Sunday temperatures at Cranbrook dropped to 28, Revelstoke to 31 and Dease River to 27, all near-record lows.



Indians Seize 'Embassy'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Militant Indians forced off Parliament Hill by riot equipped police and soldiers with fixed bayonets Monday moved into a century-old federal building today and declared it their embassy.

Three RCMP officers were slightly hurt when they clashed with 300 indians during the demonstration on the first day of Parliament. It was not known how many protestors were injured in the demonstration "one of the most violent ever witnessed on Parliament Hill."

Eighteen persons were arrested, but four were later released. Seven have been charged with obstructing police and assaulting police, four were charged with obstruction and three with assault.

Indian spokesman Louie Cameron told reporters Monday night that their list of demands would be increased. He refused to say whether they planned another march on Parliament or any other action.

"For now, we claim this building, wrecked as it is, as the embassy of the native people," Cameron said. The three-storey, 100-year-old building is an empty warehouse which was to be restored by the federal government.

"We have always recognized ourselves as an independent nation in this formal democracy. We have established ourselves as an independent government," Cameron said.

He said the Indians do not plan to try to arrange a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"Trudeau has gone all over the place, so he can come on over here," he said, referring to Trudeau's trips abroad.

Trudeau today criticized the Indian protest, saying it may have done their cause more harm than good. His government would never negotiate under the threat of violence.

However, he added, the government still is prepared to meet leaders of the group to discuss grievances.

Ken Dennis, of British Columbia, one of the leaders of the group of about 200 Indians, said the demonstration would have ended peacefully if the prime minister or other officials had come out to hear the protest.

"It was a pretty gutless thing for Trudeau to do. It would never have become violent if he had come out, and he knows it."

Meanwhile, Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan was expected to announce that he would soon visit a number of reserves to see firsthand the conditions which led to the protest.

Sources said he will visit the Caughnawaga reserve south of Montreal, and a number of reserves in the West.

The minister is also expected to tell the Commons that

Demonstrators Burn Cars

MONTREAL (CP) — About 45 officers were needed to quell a violent three-hour demonstration today at a strike-bound United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in nearby Longueuil.

A spokesman for Longueuil police said officers from the municipal force and from Quebec Provincial Police were brought in after six cars were overturned and four of them burned during a demonstration by 300 to 400 persons.

The police spokesman said four or five persons were treated for slight injuries suffered during the demonstration but no arrests were made.

The demonstration followed a report made public Monday night which said there can be no mediated or negotiated settlement to the nine-month-old labor dispute between the company and 2,500 production workers at three United Aircraft plants on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River across from Montreal.

The report, prepared for Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer by mediator Pierre Dufresne, said the position of the two sides was "irreconcilable."

The dispute, which began last Jan. 7 when production workers walked off the job to back contract demands, has been marked by incidents of violence.

Several explosive devices have been set off near the plant, slightly damaging property, and several non-union employees who stayed on the job at United Aircraft have been beaten.

NEWS BRIEFS

Bomb Suspect Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — FBI investigators in Portland, Ore., are holding a suspect in last week's mail bombing in Winnipeg which blew off the hand of a court official.

An FBI spokesman said in a telephone interview from Portland that a 50-year-old man was turned over to U.S. immigration authorities after he was picked up Sunday.

African Miners Shot

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African Press Association reports police opened fire on 500 battling African mine workers, killing two and injuring four.

The report says seven policemen were injured in the clash Sunday at a platinum mine at Marikana.

Police Kill Three

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police in the industrial city of Cordoba killed three guerrillas, including a woman, today after the group opened fire on a patrol car, spokesmen said. Two policemen were wounded.

The incident in Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, was the first reported guerrilla action since a broad anti-subversion law went into effect today.

China Marks 25th

PEKING (Reuter) — China celebrated its 25th anniversary as a Communist state today, marked by a triumphant return to public life by Premier Chou En-lai.

Chou, fighting a bout of illness, made his first public appearance in two months when he spoke before more than 4,000 banquet guests in Peking's Great Hall of the People Monday night.

Guerillas Toughen

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas holding a U.S. woman diplomat and six other hostages in the Venezuelan consulate since last Friday suddenly hardened their position today in the slow-moving negotiations with U.S. and Dominican government authorities.

Ford Will Testify On Pardon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a gesture not made by an American president for more than 100 years, President Ford has volunteered to testify before congressmen and answer questions about his pardon of Richard Nixon.

"This is to advise you that I expect to appear personally to respond to the questions raised . . .," Ford said in a three-sentence letter delivered to Rep. William L. Hungate (Dem.-Mo.), chairman of a house judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice. He offered to appear within 10 days.

It was more than the surprised congressmen had expected or asked.

Most recent presidents have asserted "executive privilege" to avoid giving information to congress — much less appear in person.

Nixon fought for that principle all through the Watergate scandal, saying he had to preserve the powers of the presidency.

The committee has before it two "resolutions of inquiry" asking Ford questions about the Nixon pardon granted three weeks ago. It was generally assumed that these would be written answers.

BLOCK BROS. EARNINGS UP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Net earnings of Block Bros. Industries Ltd. rose 37 per cent in the six months ended July 31 to $2,105,296 or 33 cents a share compared with $1,528,142 or 23 cents a share a year ago.

Chairman Arthur Block said in the report that volume of real estate sales fell sharply in the May-July period because of higher mortgage interest rates, credit tightening and higher unemployment.

TIMES NAMES NEW EDITOR

Stuart Underhill, publisher of the Victoria Times, announced today the appointment of George Oake as editor of the Times.

As editor, Oake is the newspaper's lead editorial writer and has charge of the editorial page.

Born in Edmonton, Oake has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alberta and a journalism degree from Carleton University, Ottawa.

His seven years in newspapers began with general reporting for the Ottawa Journal and later, editorial writing there.

After freelance writing in Europe, Oake joined the Victoria Times in 1969 as an editorial writer and later served as city editor and features writer before returning to editorial writing.

Asked what he sees as the function of the editorial page, he said:

"I think it's to interpret and offer opinions on the community, the province and the world at a time when they are changing faster than at any other period in the history of mankind.

"An editor and an editorial page shouldn't necessarily accept the conventional wisdom. In a sense we're the leading edge in interpreting change to people and sometimes we should play the devil's advocate to encourage debate."

Bicycle Injuries Soar 308 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) released a national survey Monday indicating a 308 per cent jump in bicycle injuries and deaths since 1970 and called on provincial governments to enact laws on bicycle equipment and operation.

The CAA said bicycle deaths rose to 28 in 1973 from 10 in 1970 and injuries increased to 2,174 from 704, and urged provincial governments to license bicycle riders and enact safety legislation.

It also urged municipal governments to co-operate in building bicycle paths to separate bicycles from motor vehicles.

Bicycle sales were 1.1 million in 1973 and are expected to reach 1.5 million this year, the association said. Before the bicycle boom began in 1971, annual sales were about 400,000.

But the association says bicycle manufacturers forecast sales will level off at about one million annually after this year.

The survey of 124 cities with populations ranging between 5,000 and 600,000 indicated that large cities are the safest cycling areas.

In cities with populations ranging between 25,000 and 100,000, the death-injury rate was five bicycle riders for every 10,000 people, considerably higher than the rate of 3.9 for cities between 100,000 and 200,000 people and 2.3 for communities over 200,000.

The CAA also discovered that:

Riders aged between five and 19 made up about 83 per cent of those killed and injured in 1973;

more than 93 per cent of all bicycle deaths and injuries were from collisions with motor vechicles;

—An estimated 112,000 bicycles valued at $5.5 million were stolen in 1973.

Throne Speech Shrugged Off

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition leaders greeted Monday's throne speech with about the same enthusiasm they would reserve for a warmed-over version of yesterday's dinner.

"There was really nothing surprising in the speech," Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told reporters. I don't see anything that hasn't been mentioned before." (For details of the speech see Page 10.)

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said the speech does not offer adequate approaches to the problem.

Despite the government's explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy, Broadbent said he saw signs in the speech that the government might do just that. He warned that such a policy would be "a very bad one" that would arouse the NDP's strongest opposition.

Social Credit leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed like "an exact copy" of the first one.

Spokesmen for business and labor in British Columbia, however, had praise for a few sections of the speech.

But they said the government's proposals for combatting inflation were vague and difficult to assess.

Prince George Has Top Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince George had the highest average income in B.C. in 1972, according to tax returns for that year.

With a reported average income of $8,583, it ranked tenth among Canadian cities, Revenue Minister Ron Basford reported Monday. Victoria was 40th, with $7,869.

Among 100 selected cities, Alberni ranked 16th, with an average income of $8,335, Dawson Creek, 57th ($7,164), Kamloops, 13th ($8,502), Kelowna, 51st ($7,555), Nanaimo, 25th ($8,111), New Westminster, 27th ($8,051), Penticton, 49th ($7,573), Prince Rupert, 31st ($7,946), Trail-Rossland, 21st ($8,159), Vancouver, 18th ($8,285) and Vernon, 30th ($7,968).

The community in Canada with the highest income was Oakville, Ont. ($9,945). Sydney-Glace Bay, N.S. was at the bottom of the list with an average income of $6,462.

The occupational group reporting the highest average income was that of self-employed doctors ($41,195). They were followed by self-employed lawyers ($30,603), self-employed dentists ($28,363), self-employed engineers and architects ($25,477) and self-employed accountants ($20,247).

Investors in Canada reported an average income of $9,178, property owners an average income of $8,925, farmers an average income of $6,954, and fishermen an average income of $6,482.

Sentimental Last Journey for Maggie

By PAT DUFOUR
Times Staff

A sombre cluster of people waited at dockside.

The Canadian Pacific's Princess Marguerite edged into place for the last time in the Inner Harbor.

Her final landing was slow and "tender" in the words of her master, Capt. Bill Warden.

There were no answering salutes as she blew her whistle for the last time.

On Dallas Road, however, a man recorded the sound on his tape recorder. Warden said the man's request for a final whistle had been sent to him before the Marguerite left Seattle on the run which ended a 70-year Seattle-Victoria ferry link.

Leaving Seattle, the aging ship was sent off with sentimental ceremony. As her foghorn bellowed a series of farewells, fireboats flanked her, spouting streams of water. Edgewater Hotel guests leaned out of windows to take pictures and wave goodbye.

The journey remained sentimental all the way, two Washington State ferries and every ship she passed in Puget Sound saluting the Marguerite as she came home for the last time.

Aboard were 260 passengers, two-thirds of them Americans, many of them reliving happier times.

One woman tearfully told Warden she had spent part of her honeymoon aboard the Marguerite.

Mr. and Mrs. Ted Stacey of Seattle were there. They had never missed travelling yearly on the CP ships since 1926 when they made the run aboard the Princess Kathleen.

Paul Nelson was making his 13th trip. He said he had to make this last one, even though it meant he would have to get back home by a more devious route — boat to Vancouver, then train.

The passengers were drawn together in a common sense of loss. One small group clustered in personal tragedy after being told the bar wasn't going to open.

By the end of the week Warden and the rest of the 35 permanent employees on Marguerite will be assigned to other CP ships. The bulk of her crew of 90 are seasonal employees, living in Victoria. Their time with CP is over.

Except for such things as table linen, cutlery and dishes, the Marguerite will remain at her old berth, just as she ended her career with CP, until a buyer rescues her to sail again or turn her into scrap.

Allan Cairns, marine superintendent for B.C. Coastal Steamships, a CP subsidiary, hinted there had been "one or two" bids for the 25-year-old ship.

He wouldn't say who was interested in the ship, which CP says is too old and expensive to operate as a paying proposition.

As he left the bridge for the last time, Warden clutched in his hand a message, written on notepaper and given him a couple of seconds before.

"Farewell Princess," it read. "We have very much enjoyed all our visits to Victoria, through our courtship, honeymoon and marriage. You will always have a special place in our memories. We will miss you."

Sucking on his pipe, Warden conceded the hastily-written note said it all.

JUMP IN JOBLESS EYED FOR B.C.

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An economic advisor to the western region of the Unemployment Insurance Commission says British Columbia is facing a winter of high unemployment, but disagrees with those who suggest the province is on the verge of economic collapse.

"I don't think the people predicting a doomsday situation are right in the sense that it is going to be a major catastrophe," Rosyln Kunin said Monday.

"But we are going to have a bad winter of the kind we had around 1970 when we got ourselves into a bit of a recession and some pretty high unemployment for the winter."

In an interview, Kunin cited economic instability in the lumber industry as one of the main factors contributing to rising unemployment.

"The bottom has fallen out of the lumber market in the United States which takes about two-thirds of B.C.'s lumber," she said.

"This has already caused a significant number of layoffs, and it doesn't look like employment is going to pick up in this sector much before spring, if then."

Alta. Civil Servants Set Up Picket Lines

EDMONTON (CP) — Picket lines went up in Alberta today as provincial civil servants began a strike called Monday night by Bill Broad, president of the Civil Service Association of Alberta.

Pickets appeared at the legislature and surrounding government offices in Edmonton, although early indications were that some civil servants reported to work and in some cases management personnel were keeping offices open.

RCMP officers at the Fort Saskatchewan jail assumed guard duty there when guards left their posts for picket lines.

In Calgary, government facilities including a jail at Spy Hill and the Southern Alberta Institute of Technology were picketed. An estimated 6,000 provincial employees in Calgary were off the job today but picketing was sporadic.

About 25 per cent of the employees at the Northern Alberta Institute of Technology were off the job.

Employees in Grande Prairie voted in favor of strike action Monday and eight RCMP officers were sent to the Peace River correctional institute to take up guard positions.

In Red Deer a skeleton staff of about 100 was left at the Alberta School Hospital and Deerhome Institute for Mentally Retarded Children and Adults which normally has a combined staff of about 1,300.

Pickets were thrown up around government offices in Red Deer, including the courthouse, agriculture building and treasury branch outlets.

In Medicine Hat civil servants reported for work today but CSA representative Anne O'Reilly said a meeting would be held tonight to determine what action the workers will take.

Some government employees, including those working for the Alberta Liquor Control Board and crown agencies, are not affected by the strike. Total membership of the CSA is about 18,000.

Broad called the strike after a meeting with Labor Minister Bert Hohol who he charged with sabotaging negotiations for a new contract by announcing last week that pay increases of seven per cent would be given to government employees.

Under current legislation employees of the provincial government are not given the right to strike. Dr. Hohol gave no indication what action the government might take. He could not be reached early today.

Broad charged the government broke the contract with the CSA by increasing civil servants' pay without prior consultation.

"The government has no right, no business to change any part of a collective agreement without the consent of the civil service association of Alberta," Broad said. The CSA's preliminary wage demand was for a $100-a-month increase for all its members beginning Sept. 1.

Broad said Monday night in Calgary the minister had no authority to give the civil servants a raise and because it was not approved by cabinet, announcement of the increase in meaningless.

Problems of Inflation Dominate Meeting

About one-third of Oak Bay's 19,000 residents are 65 or over and the problems caused them by inflation dominated the municipality's first "town hall" meeting Monday night.

It was a meeting organized by council to allow the public to offer "bouquets, beefs and suggestions," as Mayor Brian Smith put it, and about 100, mostly older people, showed up at the senior citizens' centre on Monterey for the two-hour exchange.

Aldermen and municipal staff made notes on a handful of complaints, ranging from drainage problems to inadequate water pressure, road-widening to cyclists who ride without lights at night.

But increasing municipal costs, with subsequent property tax hikes, produced the most concern and discussion focused on two main topics, the recreation centre under construction and impending contract bargaining with some of the municipality's employees represented by the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

People on fixed incomes are forced to restrict their spending and many ratepayers expect council to do the same thing, spending on just the bare essentials, Jane Hall, 356 Newport, said.

The municipal debt already stands at about $109 for every resident, she added.

Ald. Douglas Watts said the recreation centre, which will open in about a year, had been subject to the "wild inflation" in the construction industry and its cost will now be close to $3 million.

But the provincial government has been generous in its recreation grants for the project, which total close to $1 million, and federal grants are estimated at $780,000, leaving Oak Bay ratepayers with about $1.2 million to pay through long-term financing, said Smith.

The mayor said that while every effort will be made to produce operating revenue, the centre is expected to operate at a loss. There have been indications the province may provide an operating grant, he added.

Of labor negotiations, Smith said they promise to be difficult "and we may all be taking our own garbage to the dump."

The municipality, like many of its residents, also has only a fixed income (from tax revenues) and must balance its books, he said.

Awards For City Groups

Canada Council this week confirmed grants to two Victoria professional theatre groups.

Company One, now on tour of the Okanagan and Kootenays, received $23,000, the highest percentage increase given any Canadian company.

Bastion Theatre, about to launch its main stage, school tours and theatre school season, receives its biggest grant to date, $70,000.

The awards listed in the Council release — which include four more recent Vancouver groups, the Arts Club, City Stage, Genesis Theatre and New Play Centre — "illustrate the Council's decision . . . to increase aid to the newer organizations, particularly those located in regions inadequately served by the arts."

Arabs Shot

TEL AVIV (Reuter) — Three Arab guerrillas were killed by Israeli forces on the Lebanese and Jordanian frontiers, an Israeli army spokesman said today.

INDIAN CLASH

the Indians have legitimate grievances — they are protesting long-standing problems of shabby housing, poor medical care and a host of others — and that the violence Monday can not be pinned completely on the natives.

Both the prime minister and Dennis said they are prepared to talk, though the Indians now say the government will have to come to them.

Dennis said a number of Indians were hurt in the demonstration.

Outside the old federal building today, Indian guardsmen armed with clubs and wearing crash helmets stood on watch around the dilapidated building while RCMP officers on foot and in patrol cars cruised past.

Slogans were painted on the walls, most reading, "Bless the Native People; F--- the RCMP."

A small scuffle broke out as a few militants tried to force their way through a single line of Mounties guarding the entrance to the Parliament Buildings during the demonstration Monday.

About 80 members of the RCMP riot squad carrying shields and long wooden riot sticks and 300 other RCMP officers were brought in as reinforcements and with the use of tear gas they broke up the protest.

An army platoon which was taking part in colorful ceremonies opening Parliament after the summer recess aided the riot-equipped police with their bayonneted rifles.

Barrett: A Property Tax Pledge

Percy Wright said the reimbursement scheme is simply an interim financing arrangement until the new authority's own financing system comes into effect in 1975.

Under the Assessment Authority of B.C. Act, passed last spring, the independent body will receive an outright $1.5 million grant from the province for capital costs and another operating grant equivalent to the value of one-tenth of a mill applied to the gross assessed value of all property in the province.

The two grants combined will probably amount to about $4 million next year, said Wright.

Any further funds needed to operate the authority will be raised directly from property taxes by a mill rate levied equally throughout the province.

Wright said municipalities will probably experience surpluses in their administrative budgets this year since they would have budgeted to pay for their assessors for a full year.

With assessors on the provincial payroll municipalities will experience a saving, said Wright, and will also receive unexpected money as rental on the office space used by the assessors.

Assessors around the province, although they are now being paid by the province, have not yet officially been designated as provincial employees.

The commissioner said letters went out Monday to all assessors inviting them to join the assessment authority's staff and the authority hopes to have them all designated by the end of October.

The authority is "anticipating very little disruption in services" as a result of the turn-over, said Wright, but arrangements will have to be made for assessors to do the jobs they have traditionally done for the municipality in addition to property assessments for the province.

The local assessors are simply doing those other jobs now, said Wright, but in future either someone else may do them or the authority may charge the municipalities for the work done specifically for the local government.

the weather

Cloud covers all of the province with snow falling in parts of northern B.C. To the south of the Arctic front and in the milder air rain is falling along the entire coast and has reached into the central regions. Much the same pattern is expected to hold through Wednesday with the rain spreading further inland as the system moves into the interior. Temperatures will remain much the same or show a slight cooling Wednesday.

Human Touch Is Death for Boy Living in Bubble

But David Loves, Learns, And Grows

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP) — David is a three-year-old who has never known a mother's kiss or the touch of a bare human hand. He lives in a plastic bubble, and doctors say there is no medical certainty he ever will live elsewhere.

David suffers from a disease known as severe combined immune deficiency. His body has no immune defences against disease. Even bacteria that most people can easily throw off might kill him.

For three years he has breathed filtered air, has eaten sterile food and has been cuddled only by hands wearing big, black rubber gloves which extend through the wall of his bubble.

He was delivered by caesarean section Sept. 21, 1971, and was placed immediately into a plastic-walled bubble. He has lived behind plastic and glass ever since.

"It's only in the last month or six weeks that he's began to think about getting out," said Dr. Davis Freedman, a professor of psychiatry at the Baylor College of Medicine.

"I think that the next step is for him trying to remove himself from that room. The whole question is: How long can you keep someone in a goldfish bowl?"

At the request of the boy's mother and father, hospital officials have declined to give the youngster's last name or identify his parents. They said he has one sister.

Dr. Freedman says that so far David's development physically, intellectually and emotionally has gone well.

The boy is brighter than most children his age, his language skills are advanced and "he already knows his letters," Dr. Freedman said in an interview.

He also is agile and strong. He jumps and climbs and plays ball inside his nine-by-seven-by-six-foot bubble with more skill than most three-year-olds. He sleeps in a tunnel-shaped annex to the bubble.

David knows his mother and father, even though they've been only faces on the other side of a plastic wall, and responds to them with affection.

"David doesn't know there's other ways of expressing affection," said Dr. Murdina Desmond, a professor of pediatrics at Texas Children's Hospital. "It's been startling to me how much human feeling has gotten through that plastic.

"There hasn't been any s k i n-to-skin contact, but there's been lots of cuddling with the gloves."

He goes home in a portable bubble and stays with his family every six weeks or so. He lives there in a grouping of bubbles.

But for David, this no longer is enough.

Dr. Freedman says the boy is beginning to bargain, in a three-year-old sort of way, for freedom from his plastic cage.

Once, when he saw his father working, he said: "You let me out of this bubble and I'll help you."

Another time, he told his mother: "When I get out of this bubble, I'll go with you to the kitchen."

What the future holds is uncertain.

"We definitely know what it holds if we don't do anything," said Dr. John Montgomery, co-leader of the team caring for David. "We know what the future would be outside the bubble."

David's condition occurs about once in every 10,000 births. Death usually comes in about eight months.

The bubble has protected David from that.

Dr. Montgomery and Dr. Raphael Wilson, the other team leader, say the boy has only eight types of germs in his body, all apparently acquired from food. None are dangerous.

What the doctors hope to do is to awaken David's natural immunity. Next week, they plan to try injections of a thymus extract that has been used in research. Several other techniques also have been attempted.

But Dr. Montgomery says: "We don't know anything at this time that holds promise of a permanent cure."

"One possibility is that we will not have to do anything," said Dr. Wilson. He said two German infants, held in isolation for two years, spontaneously developed immunity.

There is a possibility that David could some day leave the bubble in a special suit, similar to the space suit astronauts wore on the moon. Space scientists are experimenting with such a suit for David.

David picks out his own food from a sterile cupboard. The doctors say that sometimes his selections are strange—such as carrots and pudding for breakfast. The food is infant food in jars. He can have nothing that cannot be sterilized. This eliminates bread, fresh fruit and red meat.

His sterile room has some advantages. David, for instance, cannot have dental decay because there's no bacteria to cause it. And his occasional cuts have healed rapidly.

"I have never felt sorry for David," said Dr. Montgomery. "You must consider the alternative."

'Denuded' Parkland Approved for Mining

A parcel of land will be removed from Strathcona Provincial Park to allow mining to continue in that area, Mines Minister Leo Nimsick said Monday.

The area has already "been denuded" by old mining operations, said Nimsick, and cabinet orders have approved continued mineral exploration and development on the claims of Craig Mining Ltd. and Honda Mining Co.

"We've given the parks department the okay to give them a permit to mine there," he said, "but parks plan to cut out that area of the park . . . and to increase the size of Strathcona somewhere else."

Nimsick said the decision to renew the old mining claims and remove the area from the park is the first of a long list of decisions that will have to be made in the government's program to phase out mining claims in provincial parks.

More than 900 mineral claims and leases are still in good standing in B.C. parks, he said, although the NDP has granted no new claims since it came to power.

The task of phasing out all old claims is difficult said Nimsick, "because claims to some individuals are just as sacred as a piece of land."

The government does not plan to make a blanket settlement of all park mineral claims but will deal with each parcel as it comes.

Some claims are in remote areas seldom visited by the public, he said, while others are in a prime recreational area.

Many of the old claims have no value and the government "does not want to see good taxpayers' money spent on worthless claims," he said.

Where the area is critical and has an established value, the government may negotiate to buy back the claim, said Nimsick, but in other areas it may wait until the claim peters out.

AFRICA RELIES ON VETO

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — South Africa is expected to hang on to its seat in the United Nations with the help of a U.S. or British veto in the Security Council.

But this year's vote of 98 to 23 in the General Assembly to reject the credentials of the South African delegation was the biggest yet against South Africa's white-minority government and its policy of apartheid, or racial separation.

Every assembly since 1970 has voted to reject the South African delegation's credentials, but each year the assembly president rules the vote has no effect because only the Security Council can expel a nation. This year's president, Algerian Foreign Minister Abdelaziz Bouteflika, followed the precedent.

But for the first time this year, the rejection vote was followed by a 125-to-1 demand that the Security Council review South Africa's UN credentials. The U.S., Britain and France were among countries that abstained.

Canada voted against the resolution to expel South Africa and in favor of referring the matter to the Security Council.

Explaining Canada's vote against expulsion, Ambassador Saul Rae told the assembly that any step to isolate the South African government would only "reduce our chances of success in modifying" South Africa's racial policies which Canada opposes.

"Lines of communication must be kept open if ideas are to be exchanged, attitudes modified and policies revised," Rae said.

This month's president of the Security Council is Cameroon, one of the black African nations pressing for the ouster of South Africa. The Cameroonian delegate is expected to call a council meeting soon to take up the assembly's request. But diplomats predicted weeks or months of analysis and debate before the matter reaches a vote — and a veto.

What is the right gasoline for your car?

Good Gulf Regular.

Good Gulf is our least expensive gasoline. It is formulated to satisfy the requirements of most cars manufactured before 1975 and can also be used in 1975 cars unless unleaded gasoline is specified.

NOTE: All Gulf motor gasolines, Regular, Futura and Premium, contain an effective additive package that helps keep carburetors clean and minimizes engine deposits to maintain peak performance.

Unleaded Gulf Futura.*

Unleaded Gulf Futura is our newest gasoline. It costs a few cents more than Good Gulf Regular. It is the right gasoline for all 1975 cars equipped with catalytic converters. Futura helps reduce exhaust emissions, increases spark plug life and substantially extends the life of muffler systems. Even if your car doesn't have a catalytic device, unleaded Futura will still give you these benefits. Futura also meets manufacturers' specifications for most cars manufactured since 1971. (Check your owner's manual.)

*Not available at all outlets.

Gulf Premium No-Nox.

An Uncertain Throne Speech

Like a retread, the speech from the throne opening the first session of the 30th parliament promises to get many miles out of what is essentially the same speech which opened the last session of the 29th parliament. Most of the new grooves have been carved by inflation. The government says it would not deliberately generate slack in the economy to combat inflation — an oblique reference to the fact that unemployment won't be used as a tool to lessen inflation.

But as to specifics on how the Trudeau administration will fight inflation the speech was vague. It spoke of "co-operative efforts" and "the need for restraint." Nowhere was the restraint spelled out. That will have to wait until Finance Minister John Turner produces his budget sometime in November. While generalities are the norm in contemporary throne speeches, Canadians have a right to expect a little less talk and more prescribed action when it comes to dealing with the inflationary ogre breathing down our necks. Grants for first time home buyers, incentives for farmers and fishermen, not to mention $500 million for a national petroleum corporation, are not the language of restraint.

Nor was there much mention of settling the Vancouver Grain Handlers' strike, an immediate priority for Canada's balance of payments. The controversial condition of farm marketing boards was ignored despite the smell of rotten eggs which have made political nostrils twitch from Bonavista to Vancouver Island. Otherwise, it was a melange of the old speech peppered with promises from the last election. Consumer and credit legislation, new transportation policies — although the government stopped short of upgrading existing systems with public money — and changes in the Supreme Court Act. In the latter case it is obvious the government has not changed its mind about pushing the tradition-bound court into a constitutional role, leaving the civil field to lower courts.

With his solid majority Prime Minister Trudeau is in a position to accomplish a great deal. The 68 pieces of legislation tabled in the House Monday show the government is rolling up its sleeves for a long session. And, as usual the throne speech was as flat as next year's economic growth forecasts. Canada faces some severe fests in he next year and the platitudes of today will have to be shaped into policies within a few months. This government deserves time, but the seriousness of the international and domestic economic situations demands action, not the least of which should be government restraint if it hopes to set an example for the country.

Save the Princess Marguerite

Irony abounds in the controversy over the decision by Canadian Pacific to discontinue its Seattle-Victoria ferry service. It is a move by the corporation's shipping division, which rents wharf and shore facilities from its real estate division. It will "drastically" affect its local hotel division and it is linked in one view to the desire of its railway division to cease island rail passenger service.

The reported three-year loss of $272,000 doesn't spell the difference between bankruptcy and a healthy operation for the firm as a whole, which reported a profit of $120 millions last year on its various transportation and real estate ventures. But it should be remembered that Canadian Pacific isn't a charitable organization. Like the local businessmen who are complaining about the decision and its effect on the local economy —estimates of city retail revenue generated by the ship's run range from $1.5 million to $9 millions— the company is out to make a profit.

More irony: those calling most loudly now for the provincial government to step in with tax dollars to replace a money-losing operation were in the fore of an attempt a year ago to sue the same government for damages resulting from the government ferry workers' strike.

It should not be government's responsibility to jump in with public funds to shore up private enterprise, unless it is a case of emergency in the public interest. But there are grounds for belief that a marine service with lower overhead and specialized facilities could make a go of the run from Seattle to Victoria. Certainly the summer trade is supported by large numbers of passengers.

Whether it is the Canadian Pacific that eventually decides to try again with a ship involving more modest costs, or another firm that ventures to try its luck with a service that has been a long-standing tradition of the community, the effort would be applauded by local business firms and the public as well. For some reason or other the Canadian Pacific policy for a number of years has been one of retrenchment in this area. But that does not prove that what the company is willing to give up could not be a viable proposition in other hands. Greater Victoria at least will hope so.

Do You Know These Men?

Mondale, Jackson, Bentsen, Wallace, Askew, Bumpers, Udall, Gilligan, Brown, Stevenson — hardly household names. But several soon will be, and one of them — or another complete unknown — could be president of the United States in two years, all because Senator Edward Kennedy recently withdrew from the race for the 1976 Democratic party presidential nomination.

Mr. Kennedy cited family fears about the last remaining Kennedy brother running for president, and the health of his wife and young son as the main reasons for getting out now. But the Chappaquiddick incident — when a young woman drowned in a car he was driving — must have loomed just as large. His curious actions and the continuing public doubts about his explanation of the affair could have been a formidable obstacle.

Mr. Kennedy's withdrawal breaks the logjam and promises to make for a wide open free-for-all inside the Democratic party to pick its standard-bearer for the election in the bicentennial year. According to one report, it could result in a convention "split six ways to Sunday." Small wonder that President Ford, who plans to run for election in his own right as the Republican candidate, just smiled and smiled when he heard of Kennedy's decision.

NORMAN GIDNEY

Nader Looks to B.C. for Ideas

One of Nader's Raiders came to Victoria last week, not to expose unsafe automobiles or contaminated meat, but to testify before a special committee of the B.C. legislature on the rather unglamorous subject of property taxation.

He was Jonathan Rowe, a young law student, one of five involved in the tax reform research group of Public Citizen Inc., Ralph Nader's umbrella fund-raising arm which shelter's the consumer crusader's various activities.

Rowe came here at the request of Mason Gaffney, who heads the provincial government's think tank at the University of Victoria. They knew each other from work in Washington, D.C. where Gaffney worked for the Resources for the Future foundation, another think tank.

Members of the committee had asked him to put together a diverse group of professors and other experts who could provide some ideas for the committee's job—replacing British Columbia's present unequal property taxation system. Rowe was the only non-academic in the bunch.

Talked to MLAs

But besides giving advice on his specialty, Rowe also listened and soaked up ideas on a wide variety of subjects and problems and how B.C. has handled them.

He talked to MLAs on the committee over lunch, pumped reporters who had covered the legislature, met with some key cabinet ministers and took home a thick pile of press handouts and photocopied news clippings from the files of John Twigg, Premier Dave Barrett's press secretary.

"Ralph was really excited when he learned I was coming up here," Rowe said in an interview. "We're really interested in what's happening here."

Energy, land use, resources, health insurance, areas where B.C. has not been sparing with legislation, "are really gut issues in the U.S., where there's been major legislation on all of them."

Rowe was particularly interested in how the Barrett government was able to push through the tough zoning controls embodied in the Land Commission Act, and spent some time on Friday talking to officials of the provincial agriculture department.

He took back to Washington copies of the act, which became law in May last year, and also of the deceptively short and simple Environment and Land Use Act, enacted by Social Credit in 1970, which gives the cabinet wide powers to control land use.

RALPH NADER
... interested in B.C.

As in B.C. and the rest of Canada, preservation of farmland and the family farm has become a motherhood issue in the U.S., Rowe explained. Special tax breaks and low assessment rates for agricultural land have swept the country—helped along with ad campaigns heavily financed by big agribusiness concerns.

But they apparently haven't done much to stop the creep of blacktop and spreading subdivisions. It's something the property tax committee should keep in mind before recommending preferential rates for B.C. farmland.

California is a good case in point, with the best-known of the special tax breaks. The state's Williamson Act of 1965 allowed landowners a lower assessment rate if they agreed to keep their property out of development for 10 years. Penalty for dissolving the contract before the dealine is 12½ per cent of the land's market value, usually a considerable sum.

A good deal of land has been enrolled under the program, more than 11 million acres, but unfortunately most of it is not endangered farmland. Three-quarters is 10 miles or more from the nearest city. Land close to suburbia, the land most immediately threatened, has not been enrolled by landowners who want to be able to sell quickly to developers.

Giant Subsidy

The tax break has just "created a giant subsidy for land speculation companies," in Rowe's view. In one rural California county, three of the five largest "farmers" taking advantage are Standard Oil Co., Getty Oil Co. and Tenneco Inc., another petroleum giant.

Ten years is no time at all for corporate giants like these to wait before subdividing. Irvine Ranch Co. of Orange County, home of Disneyland and Richard Nixon's hideaway San Clemente, has mapped out development that stretches 30 years into the future, said Rowe. All the tax break does is reduce their holding costs over the long haul. And it has cost taxpayers in the state an estimated $50 million so far.

B.C. legislators got high marks from Rowe, who has a professional curiosity about the personalities and mechanisms of government. His three days last week in the Birch Room on the top floor of the legislative buildings where the property tax committee heard numerous expert witnesses were "really a pleasure."

Considering the divergent traditions of government here and in America — neo-secretary monarchy versus a revolutionary democracy — and his own experience before congressional committees in Washington with court-like regal trappings, Rowe said the "shirt-sleeves atmosphere" of the property tax committee here was refreshing.

"I don't often get a chance to talk to such a group of legislators who are so receptive. They were asking really intelligent questions. They seem to have patience for complexity and detail. The U.S. Congress ought to send a delegation up here."

GEORGE OAKE

A Neat Side Step at City Hall

Municipal councils are as much against alcoholism as they are against disturbing the bucolic serenity of a good urban tax base.

As it happened council ruled out the Rockland address because of an Advisory Planning Commission policy prohibiting community care facilities in that area, other than rest homes or day care centres.

Whether the policy was in the APC's collective heads or on the books wasn't said.

Plopped Down

But as so often happens in these matters, what everyone was discussing never received a mention by the politicians. Would a middle class municipal council allow an alcoholic drying-out centre to be plopped down in an upper-middle class economic area?

Answering the question is like predicting the provincial government's attitude to the welfare-state. And Ald. Mike Young's comments that council would help the drug and alcohol people find an alternate site in a more acceptable area has to rate as one of the more elitist political statements of the year.

What is a more acceptable area? Is James Bay, Vic West, Fernwood or Gorge West more amenable to an alcoholic centre?

While Ald. Young probably didn't mean what he said, many Victorians will translate a more acceptable area to mean a working class area where residents won't complain about such a facility.

The ironies almost shout at us. In the public mind — not to mention the political mind — alcoholism brings to mind sloppy drunks reeling over the manicured lawns of Rockland in this context. If there was any way of measuring such things the better areas of this city probably account for as many alcoholics as the poorer areas.

Yet to cast city council in the role of villains pandering to the rich also evades the issue. Council simply reflects the values of our society.

If Victoria's burghers could put the alcoholic centre into Fernwood — where Cool-Aid and a hostel for girls already are — they would probably heave a sigh of relief about another problem solved. But after Ald. Young's remarks about a more acceptable area the detoxification centre will be lucky to find a few lots in a rain forest north of Port Renfrew. Why?

Alcohol and alcoholism are emotionally charged words in a province of 1,222,200 drinkers with a population of a little more than two million. Among the drinkers the B.C. alcoholism foundation estimates there are 45,000 alcoholics and about 86,200 or 7.05 per cent of the population which is drinking dangerously.

So what is a detoxification centre? It is a place where alcoholics are denied alcohol and allowed to withdraw from its effects — like any other drug addict. After a supervised 36-hour withdrawal period patients can move upstairs for up to 28 days where they will receive treatment.

As Dr. Charles Aharan, the Alcohol and Drug Commission's research director, said, only six to 11 per cent of the alcoholic population lives on skid road. The people who would be using such a centre are housewives and businessmen, the kind of people who live in Rockland, Vic West or Fernwood.

But nobody wants the problem for a next door neighbor. Fears about declining property values, fights, noise and raucous goings-on are conjured. We never think that the people who go to such a place are sick and at the end of the line. The last thing they want is a party.

Matter of Semantics

Yet how many neighborhoods would complain if an eminent group of psychiatrists established a clinic in any one area? Perhaps it boils down to a matter of semantics.

Of course there are no easy remedies to emotional attitudes. But council appears to have taken the easiest way out. In saying no to the Rockland location they have shown a class bias — at least that is how people in other neighborhoods will interpret the decision if the alcoholic centre is forced on their neighborhoods.

Rather than saying an absolute no, the city might have allowed Dr. Aharan and his people to make their points in a public hearing. If Rockland residents remained unalterably opposed to the centre — as residents in any other part of this city might well have been — then an alternative would have to be found. But the way in which council dealt with the request, falling back on the tired old conventional wisdom, really amounted to a bit of transparent buck-passing. In simpler terms, Victoria's slip was showing.

Well Supported

On behalf of the National Softball Tournament Committee I would like to thank you for the excellent coverage that we received during and after the tournament.

The coverage certainly contributed in a very large part to the success of the tournament and we were thrilled that this event was so well supported by the fans and by the press.

It was a pleasure working with your staff. Thank you. — A. E. Beasley, Tournament Chairman.

Oil Ownership

My only comment on your correspondent M. P. Paine's recent letter "Killing the Goose" is that it is obvious that Mr. Paine has lived too long in B.C. where the Socred government allowed the rape of our irreplaceable natural resources for some 20 years and governments before the Socreds did the same.

I lived for some 30 years in countries where the mining and oil companies would think they were living in a dream world if they only had a Bill 31 to contend with. When I went to Mexico in 1921 the royalty charged was only 5 per cent paid to the land-owner but this was soon changed as the Mexican constitution, under its Article 27, laid down that all natural resources belonged to the people, i.e. the government. I can assure you that these royalty charges were soon increased.

When I left the last country where I worked the government's share of all profits was 60 per cent with 40 per cent going to the oil companies and there was no lack of customers for concessions.

B.C. and in fact Canada have been the happy hunting ground for the multi-national corporations in the development of our resource industry and they find it hard to accept a change in their bonanza of the past. Surely the irreplaceable resources of a nation belong to the people.

These multi-national corporations will undoubtedly close down some of their operations and create unemployment but we must decide if we wish to continue as a "banana republic" or whether, as in the cases of the many undeveloped countries which have awakened to their plight, we will develop our resources for the good of the people and not only for profits of the few.—M. P. B. Wrixon, 1701 Cedar Hill Cross Rd.

Recycling

I am shocked by the remarks of Alderman Noel of Saanich regarding the recycling depot at Borden St. as recently recorded in the press. We should not "clamp down" on this very worthwhile and necessary project; instead we should do everything we can to aid and encourage it. Until a more suitable location can be provided by the municipalities the rent on the depot should not be increased.

I have been at the depot many times, and I have not noticed any undue untidiness, particularly I have never seen broken glass outside the building. If the sound of breaking glass disturbs nearby residents it should be a simple matter to restrict the hours at which that part of the operation is conducted. — M. Sharpe, 3232 Aldridge St.

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of October 1, 1914

NEW YORK — The Rockefeller institute announced that it had decided to make a far-reaching investigation of industrial conditions in the United States and that it has secured the services of W. L. Mackenzie-King, former minister of labor in Canada, as director of the investigation. Mr. King has conducted a great many investigations in Canada and is looked upon as one of the best men for such a task as the institute has in view. Mr. King said in Ottawa his investigation plans years of constructive study and educational work with a view to securing legislative and industrial reforms throughout the world. He will not give up his political life, however, and will remain Liberal member for North York.

Spirits They Have Called Up Are Out of Control

By MAX WILDE
London Observer

Even as the idea spreads that all men have equal rights, the progress of medicine is generating the most glaring inequalities.

The number of patients saved is increasing in absolute terms but the percentage of patients saved, compared with those who might be saved, is steadily diminishing.

This paradox is examined by Professor Jean Hamburger, a member of the Academy of Sciences of France and an expert in kidney transplants, in the Chronicle of the World Health Organization.

Hamburger cites the fact that 400,000 people die every year from destruction of their kidneys. Only about 5 per cent are saved because they live where artificial kidneys are available and kidney transplants can be performed.

But even if all the disparities in the availability of medical care were removed and all countries became fully developed, Hamburger maintains that we would be going out of the frying pan into the fire; for the immediate result would be an enormous increase in the world's population and the explosive growth of an already alarming demographic problem.

It is largely through the development of hygiene and medicine that mankind has let itself be drawn into a population expansion that has been gathering momentum at an unbelievable rate for some years past.

"It took 600,000 years for the human population to reach 3 billion, and it will take 35 years for this figure to double."

Science, Hamburger believes, has reached a point imagined in Goethe's ballad, when the sorcerer's apprentice cries: "Master, O Master, the peril is great: The spirits I have called up have escaped my control!"

The myth has now become a reality. Man is acquiring undreamed-of powers; the progress of science makes him every day more able to act upon the world and upon events. Yet the consequences of these new powers have by no means been wholly beneficial and are, in fact, creating a host of new and disturbing problems.

Until recent years a physician described the sicknesses of man but did not change their course. Today he takes a hand in destiny — he has the means of preventing or curing half the diseases that were once invariably fatal.

Doctors can counterfeit certain essential organs such as the kidney; vaccines exist which give protection against a whole range of communicable diseases; old men can be prevented from dying of pneumonia and newborn babies from contracting diseases of the blood.

And yet that very power is giving rise to 101 unexpected difficulties, partly because the traditional organization of medicine has been unable to adjust itself fully to these changes.

From the practical point of view the amount of new data the doctor has to absorb is increasing at such a rate that it is no longer possible for anyone to know the whole of medicine.

There are over 150 antibiotics, each with its own dosage schedule and side effects, while there are more than 100,000 varieties of poisoning listed at the anti-poison centres.

Even in a specialty as narrow as transplant immunology (Hamburger's own) he says that his laboratory had to take out subscriptions to 31 different journals from which it extracted, catalogued and classified, for the last year alone, over 5,000 articles.

In short, even the specialist is unable to keep pace with the growing abundance of new data, many of which are, nevertheless, essential if every patient is to benefit from medical progress.

Another problem emphasized by Hamburger is that the progress of medicine may endanger the genetic quality of the human species by allowing individuals with hereditary defects to survive, procreate, and thus make such defects still more widespread.

In the case of phenylketonuria, which affects one individual in 10,000 and results in the early death of physically and mentally retarded children, it is only necessary to prescribe an appropriate diet for the child to become an apparently normal adult, but capable of propagating the abnormality.

Another example is hereditary pyloric stenosis. Since the surgical cure for that disorder was discovered, one expert maintains, its frequency has already increased 50 times.

Hamburger comments: "If one thinks of all the diseases that have a genetic component—diabetes, mental disorders and many others—one cannot but be frightened at the speed at which the new resources of medicine may reasonably be expected to enable these diseases to propagate themselves in geometical progression, from generation to generation."

When it comes to finding solutions for these and many other problems, Hamburger decisively rejects the "anti-scientific movement" that has been emerging in recent years.

He says: "We cannot turn the clock back; man cannot go back to cruelty and disease. We cannot pretend to forget what we have learned; we cannot escape our destiny, shaped as it is by the desire for knowledge and the power to acquire it.

"On the contrary, what we probably need is vastly more research, information and thought to overcome the problems that are facing us."

Hamburger concludes that the problem is, in the last analysis, political. Experts can work out reasonable solutions compatible both with the survival of the human species and man's desires and moral imperatives, but they cannot gain general acceptance of what they propose.

"Neither the biologist nor the physician can help the politician to settle this vital question."

Competition in the Food Industry Is a Myth

By DOUGLAS FISHER

OTTAWA — The Montreal Gazette ran a series on our food industry between the 7th and 12th of September. The author was reporter Henry Aubin. The total length, approaching 30,000 words, made it the equivalent of a large pamphlet or a small booklet.

It would be useful to a public beyond Montreal if the Gazette put the series into one compilation. It would bring more information together than one can find elsewhere about our food manufacturers and distributors. More important, Henry Aubin raises both practical and esoteric questions. What I appreciate most of all as a consumer is the re-structured image of the industry which the series left on my mind.

What are some of the practical questions?

Why should so much extra money be spent by consumers for "brand-name" products, especially canned goods? The supermarkets' own lines of such goods are cheaper (or almost always cheaper) although usually they come from the same suppliers and indeed are the same goods as in the "brand-name" tins.

Aubin supports his arguments here with convincing data. Never again will I take the higher-priced "brand-name" when the chain's own line is available. Aubin makes the point that another guarantee against any major qualitative difference are the grading standards enforced by government.

Another practical question which Aubin raises and answers to my satisfaction may seem irrelevant to more skeptical people. Can we trust the executives of the food industry to tell the truth about the nature of their operations and their inter-industry relationships? You cannot trust them very much. Aubin sets out contrasting answers given by different men to the same questions.

In one case, he demonstrates through an answer provided by a Canada Packer executive that a Dominion Store executive had not told the truth.

What one is left with, after weighing the range of answers, the "no comments," the fudging and the blandness, is the feeling that competition is very superficial, particularly at the retail level. Further, there is a remarkable "insider's knowingness" in the industry, of which the poor consumer and the bumbling politician are unaware.

Aubin throws in several despairing comments from government officials who might be expected to prosecute monopoly and price-arranging and over-concentration of buying and selling power.

Clearly, these officials feel they have either inadequate laws to enforce (and these laws are inadequate because the politicians do not choose to make them tougher) or the politicians discourage crack down, even with the feeble laws and regulations that are in place.

Another question Aubin covers at length has its droll aspects. When David Lewis of the NDP raised hell about the corporate "rip-off", his main weapon was to compare figures of percentage of profits for companies from one year to another. The corporations howled that this was unfair. The fairest appraisal of profits, they argued, was to see them as a percentage of the capital invested. Invariably, this worked out to be a modest figure (10 per cent was perhaps an average).

Such modesty was especially true of the food industry. Indeed, the executives of this industry have liked to put their profit figures into an even fairer context — i.e. in terms of percentage of gross sales. This often drops the corporate take of profit down to a cent or less on every food sale dollar — a pittance.

Such modesty in profit-taking must be challenged, says Aubin, by searching out the truth on two matters. What is the operational efficiency or lack of it of these constantly growing giants of the food industry? What are the merits (largely argued in terms of bigger production lines and larger volume selling) of gigantic ism when set against the huge chunk of the consumer's food dollar that goes into expansion and more and more takeovers, but fewer and fewer manufacturers and merchandisers.

Aubin only raises the curtain on such matters. One hopes that some one somewhere, perhaps the Food Prices Review Board and-or the Economic Council or the anti-combines personnel of the Department of Consumer and Corporate Affairs or some of the provincial ministers of "consumerism" may follow up some of the openings.

For example, inter-locking relationships from banks to investment companies to real-estate holdings to major holding companies (i.e. Argus and Power) to canners and packers and grocers and chain-stores so much like the web one finds in a small village in the south of Italy.

In other words, the food industry is all too familial; there are too many uncles and cousins. There can't be much (certainly, there can never be enough) of that principle all of us are asked to revere in North America by our chambers of commerce. Competition.

With competition we get the best goods at the lowest prices. Well, by the time you finish snaking your way through some of the links Aubin discloses, you may, like me, have two yearnings: Firstly, to know much more about all these cosy corporate tie-ups; secondly, to regress to those dear days of the past when many more producers and distributors and retailers gave at least the illusion of competition.

The image I have carried of the food industry has been distorted by undue concern about advertising, promotion and packaging costs plus wonderment over the disparity between the price I pay and what the farmer or raiser gets for the basic product. The Gazette series routs such concerns within the framework of a rampant conglomeration and integration, both vertical and horizontal.

Bigness and small numbers now distinguish our food industry. It's no wonder the farmers have been organizing and taking heart from champions like Whelan. A champion for the consumers will have to be tough, smart, nosy and persistent and be given steady support if we're to see the days again when Eaton's bothered Simpsons or when Safeway had some rivals in the West.

The Gazette series on the food industry cannot be characterized as either a detailed and academic inquiry or as a completely convincing expose which includes thorough recommendations but it is stimulating journalism.

SOUTH SEAS RESENTMENT AGAINST WHITES

'Cargo Cults' to Flourish Again?

By H. D. S. GREENWAY

YANGORU, Papua-New Guinea — For more than a hundred years, ever since the Melanesians of the South Pacific started coming into regular contact with Europeans, there has been an undercurrent of feeling in these islands that the white man, with all his conspicuous wealth and chattel, has somehow managed to cheat the native out of his share.

From time to time, especially on the north coast of New Guinea and surrounding islands, this feeling surfaces in the form of the famous cargo cults — the semi-religious belief that a group or an individual has found the magic formula to insure that all the white man's cargo will at last be delivered to the indigenous natives as God and their ancestors had always intended.

At the moment these cults are lying dormant. But as independence approaches, Papua-New Guinea expects to gain full independence from Australia sometime next year, there is a nervousness among administrators that the cults will emerge again to add to the new country's already considerable problems.

"Look at it from the native's point of view," said an American missionary with many years' experience in the South Seas. "He sees that the white man doesn't seem to do much work, at least not what he would understand to be work, and yet whenever a ship or a plane arrives the cargo is always consigned to the whites — never to him. Naturally he asks himself why it is that the whites have so much and the blacks so little."

Sometimes cultists will build an imitation pier or an imitation airstrip with bamboo planes upon it to lure in the cargo that is always flying overhead or steaming by, headed somewhere else. From time to time the Australians have taken cult leaders to Sydney and Canberra to show them where cargo really comes from — that it is the product of industry and not of magic. But the cults live on.

In 1964, for example, an American survey team was working on the island of New Hanover. There was to be a national election at that time and, as far as can be determined, one of the Americans said in jest that the key to wealth and prosperity was to vote for Lyndon Baines Johnson. The American survey team's equipment was very much admired and a new cult was born.

When an election team arrived to collect the votes for local candidates, they were told that the people wanted to vote for LBJ and no one else. The cult spread to neighboring New Ireland and the cultists began to collect an "African tax" to buy LBJ. It was believed that the Australian administration was deliberately keeping LBJ away as well as the cargo which LBJ wanted them to have.

People began withholding their government tax money, and when a government patrol landed on the beach at Lokona, New Ireland, in September of 1964, they were met with a hail of arrows and clubs. Fourteen constables were injured. In the end the tax evaders were jailed and, according to all reports, the LBJ cult is either dead or dormant.

Here in Yangoru, about 50 miles from Wewak on the north coast of New Guinea, a new cult began in 1971 around the person of Mathias Yaliwan, a 43-year-old former policeman and mission worker. Yaliwan had a dream in which God spoke to him and said that if he removed the survey markers which the U.S. Air Force had placed atop nearby Mount Turu, the crops would improve and the number of fish in the rivers would increase.

His followers, who quickly grew to more than 100,000, believed that cargo would be found underneath the markers; and on the seventh day of the seventh month, 1971, Mathias Yaliwan climbed the mountain with thousands of the markers. No cargo was found underneath, but the people were not overly discouraged.

The cult became the "Pely Association," named for a mythical bird, and people were encouraged to pay money into the association's coffers. Young girls, called "flowers," were recruited to sit in long houses, called "power houses." There they would sit and shake coins in large pans. The people outside would hear the money being shaken and were told that the amount increased with each shake of the pan.

There were money gardens as well — small plots of land in which pilgrims were encouraged to bury money. Later, they would come to dig it up again and some would find that their money had mysteriously increased. Others would find that their money had just as mysteriously decreased and these were told that their faith was insufficient.

As is often the case, the cult took on some of the trappings of Christianity. Yaliwan claimed to be a Catholic, and somewhere along the line an Agatha Christie novel came to their attention. Christie sounded like Christ to them.

The Roman Catholic bishop Wewak warned that "The powers evil (were) playing on the ignorance and gullibility of our poor people . . ." Yet neither the church nor the government could do anything about it. One worry was that people would neglect their crops hoping that the expected "Cago" would take care of their needs.

Mathias Yaliman was elected to the national Parliament in Port Moresby in 1972. And last year, when he retired, he says because of ill health, another Pely Association man was elected in the by-election.

Today, Yaliman lives in simplicity with his people. He insists that the crops have improved since he removed the American survey markers and he says there are more fish in the rivers than there were before. Besides, he says, the Americans never asked the people for their permission to use the top of Mount Turu.

As for their coming independence, "everything depends on God," he said in a recent interview. When the time comes, God will send him another dream telling him what to do, but he has little doubt that he is destined to lead the country one day.

Yaliwan, clutching his bible and meeting a visitor's gaze with the intense stare of a true believer, seems quite sincere in his belief. The same cannot be said of his deputy, Daniel Hawina, with whom Yaliwan has had a falling out.

Daniel Hawina lives some miles away in a traditional village of thatched roofs with a modern office on top of a hill. There is where the association's money is kept — the coins in a big wooden trunk and the bills in a Chinese chest. Hawina says there is more than $56,000 in the chest, but a brief inspection gave the impression of less.

The money gardens are no longer in operation, Hawina said, and the power houses are temporarily out of operation because the ceremony is being changed. The "flowers" have been fired, according to Hawina, because their faith is lacking and henceforth selected men will perform the rite of shaking the coins in a pan.

But Hawina found it difficult to look a skeptical foreigner in the eye, and his glance darted away when speaking of these magic things — quite unlike the steady-gazing Mathias Yaliwan.

What does Daniel Hawina do with the money he has collected from the faithful? Some of it has gone to buy three trucks, which are used to transport association members into Wewak at a fraction of the cost of public transportation. Some of it has gone to buy a trade store that people hope to make a going concern. In the future, Hawina says, he would like to help association members establish business and improve living conditions. But he will not put the money in the bank because "white people take the profit."

The government takes a very dim view of the Pely Association. They object to the association's contention that part of their tax money should be returned to them to sue as they see fit, and the government is considering cutting back on services, such as schools, if the association holds back tax money.

The government is also annoyed because it wanted to put a microwave repeater station atop Mt. Turu. The Pely Association wanted to charge $7 million for a plot of land 50 yards by 30 yards.

The government's policy is to ignore the cult and play it down as much as possible, and it will not step in and advise the association how to invest its money because government officials feel that would be taken as official recognition of the cult.

Daniel Hawina may be a mystic, as his people believe, or he may be a crook, as the government firmly believes. But not everything the Pely Association stands for is foolish. For the cargo cults, although misdirected and confused, are basically cries for development and a chance to prosper. It is a cry heard all over the developing world, and it will be the task of the new government of Papua-New Guinea to direct these feelings into useful channels.

Strange goings-on under the palms.

Maybe you never spoke to him about drinking. But you've told him plenty.

On the subject of drinking, it's not only what you say, it's how you act.

In the family and community where solid values and moderation are a way of life, youngsters develop a sense of responsibility towards liquor—and living.

If some day they decide to use liquor, chances are they'll use common sense with it. They won't try to twist the arms of friends who choose not to drink. And if any friend constantly drinks too much, they'll figure it's a sign of sickness, not machismo.

For young and old, the same basic principle applies.

If you choose to drink, drink responsibly.

Domestic Oil Cut Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Canada would automatically cut domestic oil use in the event of a significant world oil shortage in accordance with a draft international agreement on energy sharing signed last month, according to the Globe and Mail.

The newspaper quotes Ottawa sources as saying that because Canada is a net exporter of oil and has large amounts of oil in reserve and in storage, Canadians are not expected to face actual cuts as large as those in other countries participating in the agreement.

Government experts have suggested that Canada might offset all or any compulsory cutback by tapping surplus domestic oil production in the West and by dipping into storage tanks in the East, it adds.

The agreement, reached last month in Brussels and scheduled to be signed by participating countries late this year, calls for a compulsory seven per cent reduction in the domestic use by the countries once supplies to major Western oil-consuming countries fall to 93 per cent of their needs.

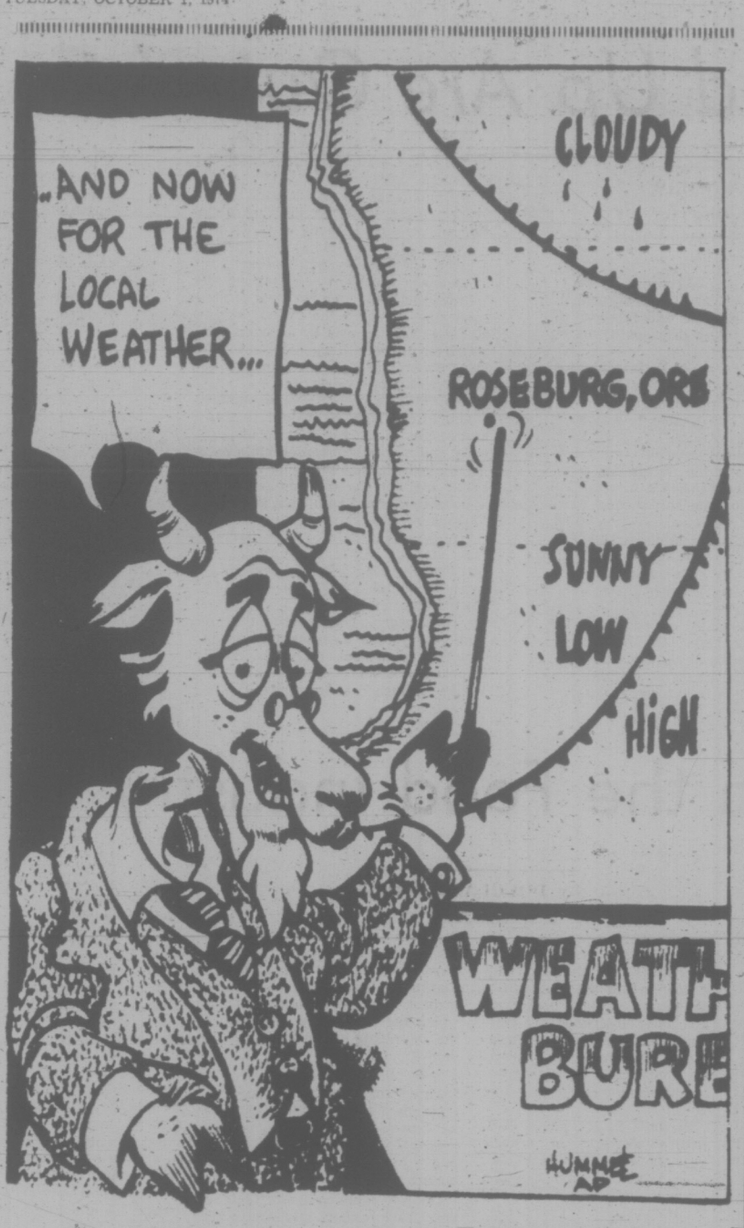
Conciliation Stressed

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon adopted a conciliatory stance toward oil-producing countries today and urged international co-operation on energy supplies.

At a news conference, he said domestic measures are the key to the U.S. solution.

"Our leverage on this is the amount of resources in the United States."

He said the U.S. has a dual approach. Conservation was one side and among options being studied were mandatory controls. Use of controls is a decision for President Ford, who is scheduled to announce some economic decisions next week, he said.



Construction Gets Their Goat

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — For years, residents of this southern Oregon lumber town have used Mount Nebo's goats to forecast the weather. Now the goats have gone into hiding. Each morning, residents would look across town to the 1,200-foot mountain.

If the goat herd was near the top, the weather would be fair. If the goats were scattered around the mountain, it would be cloudy, and if they dropped lower on the hill, rain was probable.

Tom Worden, manager of radio station KSRB, runs a special "goat weather forecast," and says the animals were 90 per cent accurate, and says the National Weather Service hit it only about 65 per cent of the time.

But this summer, noisy equipment being used for construction on a nearby highway has sent the goats into hiding. Worden says he is considering filing an environmental-impact protest against the state to stop the work so the goats will return.

Heath Pledges to Get Tough With Rebel British Unions

LONDON — After a low-key start, Britain's general election campaign has come to life with the three main party leaders wrangling about the extent of the country's economic troubles and how to deal with them.

The most noticeable change has been in Conservative leader Edward Heath.

In the first week of the campaign for the Oct. 10 election he largely forsook the usual electioneering rhetoric and held a series of discussion groups usually attended by Conservative party supporters.

At his daily news conference Monday he went on the offensive and hinted that he might get tough with Britain's trade unions if he wins the election.

Heath said the government must stand by the law or cease to be a democratic government.

To uphold the law successfully the country had to be behind its government.

Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe accused the government of hiding facts about inflation and not making people aware of the gravity of the situation.

But Prime Minister Wilson said the opposition is falsifying the economic position and creating more industrial disruption by their "alarmist" remarks.

His minority Labor government has made a significant improvement since it was elected in February, he says.

Police in Belfast, meanwhile, said they feared a growing wave of vengeance killings in the days leading up to Britain's general election following the murders of two Roman Catholics and one Protestant in 48 hours.

The shooting death of a 57-year-old Protestant in Belfast late Monday night prompted a senior police officer to say, "The latest killing inevitably raises fear that a new pattern of reprisals may be starting to emerge."

Capt. Cook's Charts Still In Use

MONTREAL (CP) — James Dawson, a Lloyd's of London insurance broker, said Monday that most maritime navigational charts are hopelessly out of date for modern deep-draught ships. The world's oceans are "almost totally unsurveyed for the safe passage of today's shipping," Dawson said in a speech at McGill University. Captain James Cook's 18th century charts were "magnificent," Dawson said, but they are still in wide use today.

The Montreal-born Dawson said that when the 72,000-ton ore carrier Igara went aground in the China Sea last year, she was using charts surveyed between 1881 and 1907.

When four United States hydrogen bombs were lost off Palomares, Spain, several years ago, the most up-to-date chart was Spanish, prepared in 1895.

Poor Press IMF For New Council

WASHINGTON (CP) — Under pressure from poor countries the International Monetary Fund IMF and World Bank will move this week to set up a new development organization.

Beyond a broad agreement on structure there still is vigorous debate over what the council will be equipped to do.

One issue is appointment of a chief executive officer — an executive secretary — and among names rumored about are those of two Canadians.

Another issue is whether the executive secretary should be appointed now or after the development council has had one or two meetings.

Development council is the shorthand term for the 23-word title in the resolution to establish the committee.

The long form is Joint Ministerial Committee of The Boards of Governors of The Bank and The Fund on The Transfer of Real Resources to Developing Countries.

Resources have been defined only in general terms.

One delegate's comment on the term was: "That's a juicy phrase. Nobody knows what it will cover."

The resolution, setting up the council, says it shall advise the IMF and World Bank "on all aspects of the broad question of the transfer of real resources to the developing countries, and shall make suggestions for consideration by those concerned regarding the implementation of its conclusions."

The poor countries are expected to approve the resolution with little or no debae. Most of the diplomatic infighting occurred when the Committee of 20 — a ministerial council dominated by the rich — drafted the resolution.

The Group of 24 — a committee of less developed countries — expressed its reservations in a communique issued after a meeting last weekend.

The communique said that while they had agreed to the text of the resolution "this text did not fulfill the expectations of the developing countries either with regard to the mandate of the committee or its procedures."

The Group of 24 gave what it thought should be the priorities:

—Dealing with problems of those countries hardest hit by current economic difficulties.

—Providing access to capital markets and promoting the flow of capital resources — money for investment — to the poor countries.

—Promoting expansion of the real value of export earnings of the developing countries.

Representatives of developing countries have been critical of the IMF and World Bank for being clubs of rich countries.

Voting power of ministerial committees of the IMF has been solidly in favor of the industrial countries.

Sources here say it is still not clear how strongly committed the industrial countries are to making the new development council into an effective force.

An assessment of that political will may be an important factor in whether the Canadian delegation would endorse having a Canadian hired for the job.

Rumored to be on the list of potential candidates are Claude Isbister, executive director of the World Bank for the constituency which includes Canada, and Maurice Strong, chief environmental officer of the United Nations.

DST End Nearer

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Congress agreed Monday to put the United States back on standard time for four months beginning Sunday, Oct. 27.

The senate passed the standard-time bill by a voice vote, sending it to President Ford who is expected to sign it into law. The House of Representatives passed the same bill last month.

The bill modifies an experiment in year-round daylight time approved by Congress last December as an energy conservation measure. Daylight time began Jan. 6, 1974, and originally was to run for 22 straight months.

Wheat Figures Don't Add Up

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — About 400,000 bushels of wheat intended for human consumption may have been sold at a higher price as livestock feed and seed, the annual meeting of the Ontario Wheat Producers Marketing Board was told Monday.

James Robertson, board auditor, said figures for the fiscal year ended June 30 do not add up and an inquiry will be made.

He said the board sold wheat dealers 6.9 million bushels of wheat on the understanding that 6.5 million would be resold to processors at $2.40 a bushel for human consumption.

The other 400,000 bushels were to be sold as feed at $4.40 a bushel and as seed at $3.18 a bushel.

In addition, the board sold 800,000 bushels directly to processors, making a total of 7.3 million bushels intended for human consumption, he said.

But Mr. Robertson said the mills reported processing only 6.9 million bushels — not 7.3 million.

Fergus Young, chairman of the board, suggested at the meeting that "maybe wheat producers should strike against the federal government for nonpayment of money which is owing . . . because they sold wheat for the domestic market for less than it could have been sold for export."

Wheat producers were promised a $10-million subsidy in September, 1973, on grain processed for domestic human consumption. But the necessary authorizing legislation has not been passed.

HER WINGS COME NATURALLY

Her grandfather, Heinrich Bahreanburg, 78, flew with the Red Baron in the First World War.

His son, August Fielman, joined the Royal Canadian Air Force as a radio navigator during the Korean conflict. At that time, Evelyn's mother was serving with the German air force as a civilian operator. She later worked for the Royal Air Force in England.

CHICAGO (AP) — Profit-taking moved in on some farm commodity futures Tuesday after most pits had set limit gains for one session and, in the liquidation that followed, some limit declines were posted on the Board of Trade.

The early demand for most commodities was influenced again by frost and freezing temperatures overnight in portions of the Midwest. Prices then came off the highs and trade followed in all pits. Heavy selling then was set off in the major pits.

CHICAGO (AP) — Profit-taking moved in on some farm commodity futures Tuesday after most pits had set limit gains for one session and, in the liquidation that followed, some limit declines were posted on the Board of Trade.

The early demand for most commodities was influenced again by frost and freezing temperatures overnight in portions of the Midwest. Prices then came off the highs and trade followed in all pits. Heavy selling then was set off in the major pits.

WORLD'S LARGEST rubber raft, 40 feet long and 15 feet wide, will be used by an expedition which hopes to be the first to complete navigation of the 2,700-mile River Zaire in Africa. Able to carry a load of 25 tons, the raft has two 240-horsepower engines which will be used for steering. The raft can also be used in carting survey parties, welfare teams and freight along rivers in remote regions.

GM Shuffles Chiefs

NEW YORK (UPI) — General Motors today has a new team of top executives to deal with sagging sales and profits, but the new officers say there will be little change in corporate priorities.

The board of directors of GM, the conservative and staid giant of the auto industry, elected Thomas Murphy, 58, to succeed Richard Gerstenberg as chairman when Gerstenberg retires Dec. 1.

The selection of Murphy, who spent all but four of his 37 years with GM in the financial department, assures control of the automaker in the hands of economy-conscious accountants. Like Gerstenberg, he rose through the bookkeeping ranks.

E. M. "Pete" Estes was named president to succeed Edward Cole, who stepped aside today having passed the mandatory retirement age of 65.

An engineer, Estes was given expanded duties as operational chief for Europe as well as North America.

At a news conference following their selection, Murphy and Estes praised Gerstenberg and Cole and said there would be little change in priorities under their administration.

Estes, however, said that more attention will be given in the future to achieving better fuel economy and meeting government safety and emission standards.

Gerstenberg said he was optimistic about the economy and the future of the auto industry. "We've seen our business pick up as the year unfolds," he said.

GM, which has increased the price of cars an average of about $500 since the 1974 models were introduced, will try to hold the line on prices but would make no promises, he said.

The nation's economy, Gerstenberg said, is showing some signs of improvement. He added, "I see no need to be concerned about a depression here if we get about this thing in the right way."

He said the Ford administration's proposal to raise the gasoline taxes to discourage consumption would be a "terrible thing to do" and would penalize those "least able to afford it."

The GM board expanded its top management group, naming two vice-chairmen — Richard Terrell, the only other serious candidate for president, and Oscar Lundin, who retires in 14 months.

In addition, four new executive vice-presidents were elected. "This enlargement of the top management group recognizes the ever increasing complexity of operating a modern, world-wide enterprise," the board said.

The change in leadership comes at a critical time for GM, hit hard by inflation, the oil shortage and slowness in adding small luxury cars to its Buick and Oldsmobile divisions.

In the first six months of this year, GM profits fell to $426 million, down nearly 75 per cent from 1973. New car sales for the year are down 24 per cent.

Massey-Ferguson

Massey-Ferguson Ltd. of Toronto, which has worldwide interests in the manufacture of industrial and construction machinery, has made a major new investment by acquiring a big West German operation based in Hanover.

The agreement involves Hanomag, the construction machinery division of Rheinstahl a.g., a group specializing in steel, shipbuilding and engineering.

"The total cost is likely to exceed 120 million west German marks, $46 million, depending on the level of inventory," said a Massey-Ferguson statement released here today.

Calgary Power

Calgary Power Ltd. has announced a quarterly dividend of 35 cents a common share, an increase of five cents over the previous quarter, payable Jan. 1, 1975.

The company also announced it was issuing, to common share holders, rights to subscribe for additional shares on the basis of one right for each common share held. The rights will expire Nov. 8, 1974.

In addition, the directors have enacted a bylaw, subject of shareholder approval, reclassifying the current 10 million common shares as class A common shares and created 10 million class B common shares.

Gulf Hopes Talks Clear Impasse

HALIFAX (CP) — Federal-Provincial negotiations should produce a satisfactory solution to a five-month impasse over the sharing of petroleum revenues, the president of Gulf Oil Canada Ltd. said Monday.

Jerry McAfee said the industry has been hurt by the dispute over higher provincial royalties and the federal government's tax proposals in the May budget that died with the defeat of the government.

That proposal was to disallow companies to deduct from taxable income the royalties paid to provincial governments.

McAfee told the North American Gasoline Tax conference that "the harmful effects of excessive taxation and government interference are too serious and too obvious to be ignored any longer."

"At stake is nothing less than the survival of the industry as the driving force behind Canada's prosperity and high standard of living."

Since the start of the dispute, many companies had reduced exploration in Canada or shifted their activities to more economically-favorable countries.

Canada has probably lost a $500-million increase in spending planned for 1974 he said, and expenditures this year will probably only match last year's $1.3 billion.

Anticipating a "reasonable solution" to the dispute, Gulf Canada has not reduced its planned spending on new energy projects this year and expects to increase them next year.

However, the company could change its mind if unhappy with any agreement.

CFSC Replaces BCSC

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia's newly-established Corporate and Financial Services Commission today assumes the function of the B.C. Securities Commission, but with wider jurisdiction.

The CFSC will hear appeals of decisions of the superintendent of brokers and will have some supervisory functions as appellate for decisions of the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

The government made three appointments to the commission effective today. There is provision for full strength of seven commissioners.

Replacing BCSC chairman A. W. Hobbs is Leon Getz, 38, who is chairman of the B.C. Law Reform Commission. He continues with that position and serves on the new commission without additional pay.

Also appointed to the CFSC were Harold Herbert, 57, and Thomas Baker, 68, both of Victoria. They replace J. V. Di Castri and Dr. J. T. Fyles of the old BCSC.

The new commission will be managed by the superintendent of brokers and the division of corporate and financial services of the attorney-general's department

Sask. Gov't 'Too Poor' To Match Aid for Aged

SASKATOON (CP) — Saskatchewan is too poor to boost old-age pensions to the levels established by other New Democratic Party governments in Manitoba and British Columbia, finance minister Wes Robbins told a senior citizens meeting.

Robbins said Saskatchewan has spent millions of dollars to improve medical services most often used by the elderly and to provide funds to help keep senior citizens at home and out of institutions.

While a senior citizens commission had urged a provincial supplement to bring pensions and supplements to $350 a month for a single person and $500 for couples, the provincial government believes it should wait for the federal government to increase pensions nationally, he said.

Noting British Columbia's Oct. 1 pension increase to $218 a month, Robbins said Saskatchewan simply does not have the resources to match that amount. Slackening revenue receipts, reduced federal grants and the effects of inflation were cited as reasons for not using some of the province's current $65-million cash surplus to help pensioners.

The minister said there will be some relief for couples forced to live on one pension between the time the husband retires and the wife reaches 65.

The social services department is expected to announce an income supplement for such couples effective in the next provincial budget, he said.

Senior citizens owning their own homes could apply for grants to permit renovations and improvements, allowing them to stay at home rather than going to an institution. Robbins agreed with suggestions that some rent control should be instituted to prevent landlords from charging exorbitant rents or raising the rent to cover any pension increase governments provide.

CNIB Study

EDMONTON (CP) — A nation-wide study into the needs of the blind has been started by the Canadian National Institute of the Blind.

Information is being sought from the blind, their relatives and friends, educators, doctors, volunteer workers and others which will enable the CNIB to evaluate existing programs and the need for new ones.

Fine Reduced

EDMONTON (CP) — The Federal justice department has filed an application for leave to appeal a district court judgement last week which reduced fines levied against Larry Messier, a separate school trustee, to $250 from $20,500.

The appeal was launched in Alberta Supreme Court.

Messier was fined for making false or deceptive statements on income tax returns. He appealed to have his sentence reduced. Another fine, of $25,000, for evading taxes was not appealed.

Provincial court judge John Cormack reduced the fines saying there appeared to be a question of double prosecution for the same offense involved.

50% Land Leased

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Manitoba provincial government has leased approximately 50 per cent of the 38,742 acres of farmland it has purchased since initiating a land-lease program one year ago.

The land has been leased back to farmers whose financial situation would not allow purchase through normal lending agencies.

More than 90 separate deals have been arranged through the Manitoba Agricultural Credit Corporation since the program's inception Oct. 1, 1973.

Electrical Fire

WINNIPEG (CP) — An electrical malfunction has been blamed for a fire which destroyed the main structure at Bannack Point rehabilitation Camp Tuesday evening near the small community of Seven Sisters Falls, about 35 miles northeast of Winnipeg.

No injuries to staff or inmates were reported in the blaze which caused approximately $125,000 damage. All 21 inmates were immediately transferred to Headingly Jail in Winnipeg.

Correction and Rehabilitation Minister J. R. Boyce said that based on consultation with fire commission officials and on-site inspections, the blaze apparently began in an inside wall and engulfed dormitory, dining room, kitchen and office facilities before being extinguished.

Tax Adjustments

SASKATOON (CP) — There will be some tax adjustments in the next provincial budget, Saskatchewan Finance Minister Wes Robbins says.

Expenditures this year will exceed $1 billion but there should still be a surplus, he said in an interview.

He also said agriculture revenues will be good next year because of deferred payments.

There will be no increase in income taxes but there will be reductions in some taxes and increases in others, Robbins said.

Housing Plan Hit

OTTAWA (CP) — A government housing package designed to ease the housing crisis was unwrapped in the throne speech Monday revealing items from the defeated May budget and the Liberal election platform.

Opposition spokesmen said the government housing plan will do nothing to relieve the housig shortage.

Ed Broadbent, parliamentary leader of the New Democratic Party, and Sinclair Stevens (PC-York Simcoe) said the government should have stepped in with a massive program to increase housing supply.

The throne speech refers to additional assistance for buyers of moderately-priced housing and government sources said this includes the $500 home purchase grant for first-time home buyers. It also included government insurance of conventional lenders under the Assisted Home-Ownership Program AHOP.

Broadbent said the government promise to continue asking mortgage lenders to provide low down payments for moderately-priced housing is a "very clear indication of the weakness of the whole mortgage policy." Without teeth, this would not enable the goverment to compel lenders to follow these guides.

Stevens said the government proposal to increase the supply of land for housing is a motherhood statement. The government should say specifically that it will launch a massive program of providing serviced land for housing, he said.

Nothing short of a giant program bringing thousands of acres of land into the housing market would suffice, he said.

Pot Law Changes

OTTAWA (CP) — Health Minister Marc Lalonde says he plans to introduce legislation within the next month to change the country's cannabis laws.

Cannabis marijuana and hashis will be switched from the Narcotics Control Act to the federal Food and Drugs Act, Lalonde said Monday in an interview following the Throne Speech.

The drugs act now covers prescription drugs as well as controlled and restricted drugs like amphetamines and the LDS hallucinogens.

Lalonde said the legislation would set out in detail how cannabis would be controlled and what exact penalties would be imposed.

It is expected the proposed changes will mean cannabis possession will no longer be punishable by jail sentences although the offence will be subject to fines.

Penalties for trafficking, importing and cultivation are expected to remain stiff.

Legislative changes will do little, however, to alter the current practice in most courtrooms. Although first offenders in cannabis possession cases can be sent to jail, the courts usually impose only fines.

The proposed cannabis changes were announced more than two years ago by then Health Minister John Munro following publication of one of the Le Dain Royal Commission reports calling for more liberal cannabis laws.

'Straight Meeting' Sought by Barrett

Prime Minister Trudeau's call for a series of meetings on inflation should be "a straight meeting between the premiers and the prime minister," Premier Barrett said Monday.

He hoped the talks proposed by Trudeau in Monday's throne speech would not be on a province-by-province basis.

Barrett said he was pleased Ottawa had changed its mind on the need for top-level inflation talks.

The request for talks had been made by each premier in recent weeks and rejected by Ottawa.

"I can only think they (Ottawa) realized an error had been made in turning down the suggestion."

In general response to the speech, the premier said it was too early to comment on the promise of excess profits legislation but naturally agreed the concept is "admirable."

Other statements in the speech are "pretty general," he said, but he hopes the promise to share nursing home costs will also mean sharing for chronic care hospitals.

"If it doesn't we'll continue to press for that," he said.

There was no mention of allowing provincial governments to get involved in banking, said Barrett, despite the promise by Prime Minister Trudeau at the western economic opportunities conference last July.

The premier said earlier this week if the federal government does not start allowing provincial government participation in banks, B.C. will move to take a share in provincially-controlled financial institutions.

'Half-Pregnant'

OTTAWA — (CP) — Sweeping transport proposals in the throne speech Monday were criticized by opposition spokesmen as either too general or "half-pregnant."

The throne speech, read in the Snate, mentioned rail passenger and freight improvements, a new national ports policy, additional aid for municipal airports nad new government machinery for effective management of ground transportation.

These proposals were fore-shadowed by the Liberal election platform. The government refrained from promising national passenger and rail freight car corporations, as in the election campaign, because the railways have shown renewed interest in rail passenger service, government sources said.

Les Benjamin, New Democratic Party transport critic, said this mixture of competition and stronger government rate control is like being half-pregnant.

"They can't have it both ways," Benjamin said.

Fast Action On UIC Bill

OTTAWA (CP) — Amendments to the Unemployment Insurance Act promised in the throne speech Monday will be introduced in the Commons "fairly shortly," a spokesman for the Unemployment Insurance Commission said.

The proposals had been promised in the last throne speech delivered last winter, but the July 8 federal election prevented their introduction into Parliament.

The UIC spokesman said Monday that the changes will "encourage rapid re-entry of the unemployed into the labor force and make the program more flexible and responsive to regional differences."

Something Old, Something New

OTTAWA (CP) — Faced with dwindling supplies of oil and natural gas, the federal government promised Monday to take measures aimed at encouraging more exploration.

The government outlined a mixture of old and new proposals in the throne speech that it hopes will increase the search for new petroleum supplies.

Bills setting up a national petroleum corporation and giving the government authority to collect an export tax on crude oil will be reintroduced, the speech said. Both measures died when parliament was dissolved for the July 8 election.

But the government also promised steps to ensure that oil and gas prices are regulated "in a manner which will encourage necessary exploration and development in Canada."

Energy Minister Donald Macdonald said outside the house that the first steps came last week when he announced a 67 per cent increase in the price of gas exported to the United States.

Increases in domestic prices also are expected, but the amount has not yet been announced, the minister said.

Discussions with the producing provinces were continuing.

Macdonald said the government still plans to bring the price of gas in stages up to the level of an equivalent amount of oil.

It hoped the higher gas prices would lead to greater exploration efforts by the petroleum countries.

But the government's plans drew some sharp criticism from opposition parties.

Alvin Hamilton (PC—Qu'Appelle), opposition energy critic, said the government was "buggering up" the oil and gas industry.

He suggested now that the government has decided to do something for the gas producers, they should also plan to help the oil producers as well.

Canada was losing part of its oil export market in the U.S. because offshore oil could be obtained at lower prices, he said. The export tax should be reduced.

Credit Legislation Overhaul Vowed

OTTAWA (CP) — The goversment promised Monday to provide consumers with limited protection against shady selling techniques, misleading loan interest rates and potentially-dangerous electrical products.

In the session-opening throne speech, the government said it would amend the Combines Investigation Act to protect people against "unfair or uncompetitive business practices such as misleading advertising and pyramid, referral or bait-and-switch selling."

Further, it would overhaul credit legislation in an effort to force disclosure of effective rates of interest on all loans and revise bankruptcy laws to help consumer debtors.

But the speech made no mention of promises by Mr. Trudeau to provide a loan-insurance plan to give what was referred to in the election campaign as "low-income, steadily-employed wave earners" access to credit they otherwise would not receive.

Paycheque Plagues Mini-Party Leader

By ANDRE OUIMET
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Real Caouette's status as leader of a political party in the Commons is still fuzzy but the 11-member Social Credit party itself was given official recognigiton as Parliament opened.

Party leaders rate an extra $4,000 a year, but legislation granting them the allocation specified they must head a minimum of 12 MPs in the Commons, and that law would have to be altered if Caouette were to continue receiving the extra money.

Ironically, the number 12 was chosen as a favor to Caouette in the mid-sixties when the Social Credit party split into two groups and Caouette moved to have his group recognized as the only official one of the two.

Recognition of the party itself, however, is not tied to legislation, and Monday Cauuette moved quickly to have his party's position clearly established despite his loss of four seats on July 8.

He was first recognized by the clerk of the House to speak for his group on the question of the election of Speaker James Jerome, and later he was recognized by Jerome when party leaders eulogized the late M. J. Coldwell, who died recently.

Caouette went out of his way to point out that the former CCF leader had once headed a party made up of only eight MPs in the Commons.

Later, there were no objections from the floor of the House when a member of the Social Credit party was nominated and appointed to the striking committee — the House committee which sets up individual committees.

This amounted to official recognition as traditionally the striking committee is made up a proportionate number of members of each party in the House. If the Social Credit party had not been officially recognized, its 11 members would all have been classified as "independents" and none would have been appointed to the committee.

But where recognition is really important is in the area of research funds allocated to official parties in the House.

These funds are voted to the parties for the renumeration of research staff and are considered of vital importance for opposition parties in the preparation of questions and various debate positions.

However, the commissioners of internal economy — four cabinet ministers — sitting with the speaker, are the ones who decide whether or not these funds will be made available and they are not bound by the 12-member rule.

A source close to the Privy Council said that the recognition of Caouette both by the clerk of the House and later by the new speaker and of the party on the striking committee would probably constitute enough precedent for he commissioners to grant the research funds to the social credit party.

Added to the problem is the fact that if funds are granted, Caouette is expected to appoint his son Gilles — defeated on July 8 — as head of the research staff.

This is reported to be resented by at least two sitting social credit MPs who would like to succeed Caouette some day and feel that Gilles Caouette would be given an unfair advantage over them if his father arranged for him to have an Ottawa post despite his election reversal.

Caouette is knomn to favor Gilles as his eventual successor.

The two hopefuls have said privately they would sit as independents if the funds are allocated and Gilles Caouette gets the post.

Caouette would then have only nine members in the House, and the whole problem of recognition could start all over again.

Henry Admits Fear of Hoover

WASHINGTON (WP) — U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger suggested to Senate investigators that his acquiescence in the 1969-to-1971 national security wiretaps were prompted, in part, by his fear of the late J. Edgar Hoover's political power in Washington."

Kissinger's admission was contained in closed door testimony, given last July and made public in heavily sanitized form Saturday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

The testimony did not resolve any of the major contradictions between the secretary's own version of the wiretapping episode and that of the FBI as contained in memoranda left by Hoover and the testimony of other bureau witnesses.

"My impression that Hoover was rather suspicious of me . . . and therefore in my conversations with Hoover I might have had a tendency to show him that I was alert to the danger of security, particularly considering his political power in Washington," Kissinger told the largely friendly Senate committee.

He made the observation when questioned about a May 9, 1969 Hoover memorandum reporting a Kissinger demand that the FBI uncover the source of news leaks and that he would "destroy whoever did this if we can find him, no matter who it is." Kissinger amplified before the committee:

"The idea that Director Hoover would take orders from a presidential assistant who had just come to Washington, I think, would be contradicted by anybody who had ever dealt with Director Hoover."

In their testimony both Kissinger and his former deputy, Alexander M. Haig Jr., minimized their role as initiators of wiretap requests and placed the responsibility on Hoover and former President Nixon, who has publicly acknowledged he was responsible for the surveillance program.

Kissinger said that the first four wiretap tragets, three of them National Security Council subordinates and a former senior Pentagon military adviser, were designated by Hoover.

Haig, who was identified in FBI records as having initiated requests for 12 of the 17 wiretaps, testified that "I never would have submitted a name that I did not get from Dr. Kissinger, or from the President with Dr. Kissinger's knowledge . . ."

Services for Newsman

Memorial services for Victoria resident and longtime B.C. journalist Gus Sivertz will be held at Royal Oak's First Memorial chapel Wednesday at 4 p.m.

Sivertz died at Victoria's Sandringham Private Hospital Sunday morning. He was 79.

He is survived by his wife Marjorie; a son Henry George of Salmon Arm; a daughter Elinor (Mrs. John Palmer) of Victoria; six granchildren; four brothers, Dr. Christian of London, Ontario, Dr. Victorian of Seattle, Ben Gestur of Nanoose Bay and Samuel of New Haven, Conn.

Born in Victoria July 29, 1885, Sivertz joined the 2nd Canadian Mounted Rifles in 1915 along with two of his brothers and served in France until 1918 when he was wounded at Cambrai.

He also served in the Second World War, joining the Pacific Command under General George Pearkes in 1941.

Silvertz worked on the Vancouver Star until the newspaper folded during the depression, and was one of the founders of the Vancouver News-Herald, where he worked until about 1930.

On moving to the Vancouver Sun he was a reporter and columnist there until his retirement.

In the late 1950s some of Sivertz's feature writing was published in the Victoria Times.

DEADLY FLU TO HIT U.S.

ATLANTA (UPI) — A new and deadlier flu strain is expected to hit the U.S. this winter, according to the centre for disease control.

Dr. Larry Corey of the viral diseases branch of CDC said the Port Chalmers flu will spread over much of the U.S. after first being identified and isolated in New Zealand.

Corey said the Port Chalmers variety has the type A strain of flu virus which is deadlier than the Type B flu prevalent in the U.S. last winter. He said its effects were worse because it more often hits adults, compared to Type B which mainly afflicts children who are more able to resist the disease.

He said several cases of the Port Chalmers disease were isolated in Georgia and Mississippi during the summer, and it is expected to appear in the southeast, midwest, southwest and Pacific regions this winter.

Relatively mild outbreaks should occur in the mid-Atlantic and northeast regions, he said, because both had outbreaks of Type A flu last winter.

But despite the possibility of an increase in flu-related deaths, Corey said, only about one in every five in the "high risk" group — the elderly, very young and chronically ill — is expected to get flu shots.

He said flu vaccine is between 70 and 80 per cent effective and has been updated to offer protection against the Port Chalmers strain.

Parties Appoint Aides

Opposition leader Bill Bennett has a new research assistant who will be paid $12,132 a year by the provincial government.

The appointment of Arthur Weeks as research assistant was approved in cabinet orders released Monday.

Other administrative appointments approved by cabinet include the promotion of NDP caucus researcher Roland Morgan to the $17,628-a-year post as acting executive assistant to the caucus.

The new minister without portfolio for northern affairs has also acquired an executive assistant as of Oct. 1.

NDP $7M Ad Fund Stays

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. New Democratic Party government will continue to rely on advertising agencies and their experts, provincial secretary Ernie Hall said Monday.

"We have to put our programs in front of the public regardless of the editorial stance of the media," he told the American Association of Advertising Agencies convention.

Hall told his predominantly-American audience that the provincial advertising budget is about $7 million and "we would be remiss if we didn't put the advertising expertise in B.C. to work."

He said the criteria for selection of advertising agencies by the government is that they have a base in B.C. and preferably be Canadian-owned. Some have refused government contracts.

Hall said the government has been spreading its advertising contracts among a greater number of agencies than has been done before in B.C.

"Some are not persuaded in our political beliefs but we have been pleased with their professional enthusiasm and results," he said.

Hockey: What Shape These Values Take

It's been a confusing weekend. More than that. Make it a week. Because somewhere along the line hockey values appear to be all screwed up.

First, a quick peek at the Vancouver Canucks, this area's representative team in Division Three of the new National Hockey League. Some say you can have 'em, especially after last week. The Canucks failed to impress anybody by losing a couple to the Philadelphia Flyers, the NHL champs; and apparently against Pittsburgh in Vancouver on Saturday night when they lost 5-4, they weren't any great shucks either.

So on Sunday night here they do an about face and bomb the same Penguins 9-6. Sure, they had to look better, but did the Penguins look worse? After all, fair's fair.

Now the Penguins. In Vancouver Pittsburgh coach Marc Boileau was quoted as saying the Penguins weren't about to be satisfied with just second place behind Montreal Canadiens in the new Division Two of the NHL, because, simply, he and his players felt they had an excellent chance to finish ahead of the Habs. So what else is a coach to say? Still, by all reports, the Penguins were easily the masters of the Canucks that night, and perhaps Boileau had a point. Here on Sunday he was laughing and joking before the game too. But only until the second period. That's when he saw the other side of the coin. Suddenly his defence collapsed, or decided to take the rest of the night off, or both; and his goalkeeping, as well, looked suspiciously suspect as the Canucks startled everybody by ramming in five straight goals.

Not in the Contract

It was quite obviously the best performance by the Canucks this fall, more so because they went without a number of their regulars, and for that they get a big plus. But again, were they that impressive, or Pittsburgh that bad?

Boileau wasn't immediately available for comment after the game. The key word is "immediately." Because no sooner had the last whistle sounded than back on the ice went the Penguins.

This wasn't any mock horror. This was for real. Just a few stops and starts, please, and up and down that ice until I tell you to stop. That was the gist of the message the Penguins got. And there is an important point here. Either Boileau should be admired for what he did, or he'll be getting a note, a stiff one, from the NHL Players' Association. Maybe even from the NHL itself. Overtime, and not in the contract! Tut! Tut! And on Sunday night! And how about that good old image of the NHL — would it be tarnished? And just wait until Alan Eagleson hears about this!

More important, where does that leave the Penguins in regard to Boileau's belief they can give the Habs a reasonable fight for divisional honors. Not very close, in this humble opinion, even if they do have one highly competent and high-scoring line in Lowell MacDonald, Syl Apps and Jean Pronovost, perhaps one of the best in the league. Because they've just got to be weak in goal if Sunday's show was any criterion. Gary Innes and Bob Johnson were the victims of the Vancouver barrage and, even if they are young and didn't have much chance on some of the shots which beat them; they didn't otherwise impress as being ready for the NHL either.

Goalkeepers in Need?

So the Canucks were that much better? Well, that's open to doubt too, especially considering all of last week's results. In four games, 19 goals were pumped into the Vancouver net, the Penguins getting 11 in two. So if Pittsburgh is suspect, agreed, then perhaps Phil Maloney hasn't found the answer to his goalkeeping problem either. He has been looking for a No. 2 man behind Gary Smith, who maybe isn't even in a No. 1 frame of mind yet. But then Gary always did sulk well, didn't he? Meanwhile, Ken Lockett and Dave McLelland got their chances at the weekend, and the best guess is that school is still out on who could be the final choice. Perhaps Lockett? Or is there still someone else in mind?

Okay, so nobody looked great, really, in what could best be described as a loosely-played game. On the other hand, if Pittsburgh is to be a threat to Montreal in their division this year, then, objectively, shouldn't the Canucks be considered as at least a good second to Chicago in theirs?

Sure. But if Sunday's performance is all that Pittsburgh has to offer, then the Canucks aren't likely to find much easier all season, are they? And that doesn't leave them on too high a pedestal. Does it? You figure it.

Still, why panic? Maloney doesn't appear too worried. He said earlier he didn't care how many points the Canucks got from their exhibition games, because none counted anyway. He just wanted to look, and then decide. He would assess the club as he saw it, and if Jim Mair had a good game on Sunday then he likely would see that, too.

But oh well, there's still a week to go before the start of the season, and if Sunday's points weren't hard to come by for the Canucks, at least Boileau had one answer to possibly why.

His post-game drill certainly didn't compliment his club and neither did it flatter the NHL. On the other hand it was one of the best moves the Penguins made all night.

World Title Won By Soviet Lifter

MANILA (AP) — Superheavyweight Vassilli Alexeev of the Soviet Union reaffirmed his supremacy as the strongest man in the world, breaking his world record with a total lift of 937 pounds in the final of the 28th world weightlifting championships on the weekend.

Alexeev, who won the snatch event by hoisting 407¾ pounds, jerked 529¼ pounds in his second attempt to gain the overall championship among 11 of the world's superheavyweights.

The 32-year-old Soviet mining engineer was given an extra attempt at 540½ which he easily made to set a world record established outside the competition.

The brilliant performance of Alexeev, who became the third Soviet triple gold medalist in the nine-day tournament, over-shadowed Bulgaria's victory in the over-all team championship with the Soviet Union finished second with 74 while Poland was third with 50.

Three-Hitters Maintain Tie

By The Associated Press

Bruce Kison of Pittsburgh Pirates and Bob Forsch of St. Louis Cardinals matched threehitters Monday night to keep their clubs in a deadlock for first place in the National League East.

Kison, aided by pinch-hitter Richie Zisk's tie-breaking seventh-inning triple, pitched the Pirates to a 2-1 victory over Chicago Cubs. Meanwhile, Ted Simmons' three-run homer in the first inning provided enough of a margin as Forsch pitched the Cardinals to a 5-1 win over Montreal Expos.

In the National League West, Houston Astros prevented Los Angeles from clinching the title, beating the Dodgers 4-1. Los Angeles now leads second-place Cincinnati by two games, with two to play. St. Louis and Pittsburgh also have two games remaining.

Baltimore Orioles increased their lead in the American League East to one game over idle New York Yankees with a 12-6 triumph over Detroit Tigers. Both New York and Baltimore have two games left.

Kison had a shaky first inning, allowing two singles, a hit batsman and a bases-loaded walk to force in a run, but then settled down.

Kison, 9-8, allowed one single and a walk the rest of the way for his strongest game of the season and his first complete game since 1972. He has been in and out of the Pittsburgh starting rotation this season, after being plagued by arm trouble in 1973.

Zisk, batting for shortstop Frank Taveras, clouted his game-winning triple in the seventh off loser Bill Bonham, 11-22, to score Manny Sanguillen, who had singled and taken second on a wild pitch.

Forsch, a rookie called up from Tulsa in July, pitched nohit ball for 6 2-3 innings at chilly Jarry Park in Montreal. The temperature was 46 degrees at game time, with winds up to 20 miles an hour.

Forsch's effort was quite a turnabout from his last start Friday, when he was pounded for five runs in one-third of an inning by Pittsburgh.

Reggie Smith added a two-run triple in the seventh, but Forsch had more than enough runs as he raised his record to 7-4.

The Dodgers were stopped by the six-hit pitching of Larry Dierker and Ken Forsch. Dierker, 11-10, went the first six innings but left when his arm stiffened.

Wayne Garrett's three-run homer for the Mets backed the seven-hit pitching of Jerry Koosman.

The Orioles collected 16 hits, three each by Bobby Grich, Mark Belanger and Don Baylor, on the way to their seventh straight win. Earl Williams and Grich each homered and drove in three runs.

Cougar Netminder Bob Leslie Sidelined by Injured Finger

Victoria Cougars, who open their Western Canada Hockey League season Friday against the Bruins in New Westminster, gained one player and lost another Monday.

Coach Pat Ginnell announced the signing of 18-year-old Bob Nault, a promising right winger from Kenora Thistles of the Ontario Junior League, and learned that goalkeeper Bob Leslie, who figured to be the number-one netminder this season, will be out of action for about two weeks.

Leslie suffered a finger injury in the Saturday night game against Seattle Totems and needed surgery Sunday to repair the damage.

Ginnell sent Eccles, who played eight games for the Cougars last season, and rookie defenceman Dan Roulston to the Nanaimo Clippers for further seasoning. Clippers are the Cougars' affiliate in the B.C. Junior League.

Leslie's injury leaves the Cats with 19-year-old Lloyd Saar, a regular last season with Kamloops Chiefs, and Saanich-product Dan Rogers, a 17-year-old who was previously ticketed for Nanaimo, as the netminders.

Cougars now have 20 players on the active list — 12 forwards, six defensemen and two goaltenders.

But that number may be reduced by one later today when Ginnell and defenceman Kim Clackson appear along with Kamloops' coach Harvey Roy before league president Ed Chynoweth in Calgary.

Clackson was suspended pending a hearing after he was involved in an incident during an exhibition game in Kamloops last week. Ginnell and Roy were also implicated in a fracas.

Turning Over New Leafs Brings Red Kelly a Win

By The Canadian Press

Newcomers Dave Williams and Blaine Stoughton put coach Red Kelly in a happy mood Monday night.

Williams, playing on a line with Stoughton and Norm Ullman, had a goal and two assists in helping Toronto Maple Leafs defeat Buffalo Sabres 6-2. It was the second straight win for the Leafs over the Sabres—Toronto won 5-4 Saturday in Buffalo.

"I was really excited about the way Stoughton handled himself and Williams is starting to go a lot better now," said Kelly.

Williams, the Leafs' No. 2 amateur draft choice this summer, had 52 goals and 56 assists while picking up 310 minutes in penalties as a junior in 1973-74 with Swift Current Broncos of the Western Canada Hockey League.

In other games, California Golden Seals surprised Chicago Black Hawks 4-2 in Kingston, Ont., and New York Rangers took a 5-1 victory at home over Detroit Red Wings.

Stoughton, acquired from Pittsburgh Penguins earlier this year for Rick Kehoe, had a goal and an assist in the game at Toronto. Ullman, making his first start after suffering a groin injury at the beginning of training camp, also had a goal and an assist.

Jim McKenny, Clare Alexander and Errol Thompson scored the other Toronto goals. The Leafs, 3-2-1 in exhibition play, were without Bob Neely, Lanny McDonald, George Ferguson, Dave Keon, Brian Glennie and Gary Sabourin, all absent because of minor ailments.

Rick Dudley and Craig Ramsay scored for the Sabres.

Craig Patrick scored both the winning and insurance goals to give the Seals their first exhibition win after two losses. It was Chicago's first defeat against two wins and a tie.

Len Frig and John Stewart shared the other California goals, while Dennis Hull and Cliff Koroll scored for Chicago.

Power-play goals by Brad Park, Pete Stemkowski and Ted Irvine led the Rangers, 5-0 in exhibition games, to victory over the Wings, 0-5.

Nick Beverley and Ron Greschner got the other New York goals. Bill Lochead scored for Detroit, giving the Wings a brief 1-0 lead in the first period.

In other developments, the Rangers announced that they have suspended backup goaltender Gilles Villemure indefinitely after he left the club for the second time in a week following a contract dispute.

Leave Them Alone, They'll Come Home

Sharon Young led her Esquimalt team to a thrilling victory over Mt. Douglas Monday in the Greater Victoria High School Cross Country League — and this time the girls didn't get lost.

The eight-meet league was to start a week earlier but fire hazard prevented the use of thetis Lake Park and the venue was shifted to Belmont-Fisher High School last Wednesday.

The boys managed the course, with defending-Island champion Tom Griffin winning the opener, but, says league chairman Tom Hatcher of Belmont-Fisher, "the girls lost their way."

"The lead runner took a wrong turn somewhere and the rest followed like sheep," said Hatcher. "we scrapped the whole thing and will make up that race later."

Getting lost didn't make the girls too happy, it seems. There were 73 runners in that first ill-fated race; only 39 showed up at Monday's meet, hosted by Mt. Douglas and run from Centennial Stadium.

Miss Young covered the 1¼-mile course in eight minutes, 44 seconds to beat defending champion Ulla Hansen of Mt. Doug. Grade 10 student Julie Raines of Belmont-Fisher was third, Sharon Docherty of Esquimalt was fourth, Debbie Scott of Claremont finished fifth and Su Hutchinson of Mt. Doug was sixth.

Esquimalt was first in the girls' team race with 53 points, worked out on the reverse scoring method. Mt. Doug was second with 57 and Claremont was third with 67.

For the boys, Monday's event was their second of the season and Griffin and his Mt. Doug team made it two in a row.

Griffin won the 3¼-mile race with Brian Blamey of Oak Bay second, Jon Smith of Oak Bay third, Kevin Kendall of Mt. Doug fourth, Dave Cox of Vic High fifth and Larry Wheeler of Mt. Doug sixth. The Mt. Doug team was followed by Claremont with Oak Bay third. A total of 73 runners competed.

In the opening race, it was Griffin first, Blamey second, Cox third, Smith fourth, Wheeler fifth and Tony Ellwell of Mt. Doug sixth. That time, Mt. Doug was first, the Oak Bay team second and Claremont third.

Late Goal Gives Bays Soccer Tie

Pete Zachary's goal eight minutes from the end Monday earned Oak Bay Bays a 1-1 tie with the Greater Victoria High School Soccer League-leading Reynolds Roadrunners.

Roadrunners, who had scored 28 goals and had only four goals scored against them in winning their first six games in a row, grabbed a 1-0 lead on Drew Finnerty's sixth goal of the season 15 minutes into the second half.

However, Oak Bay, kept in the game by the fine goalkeeping of Scott McDonald, came on strongly and kept Reynolds under pressure for the last 20 minutes.

Vic High Tyees moved into fourth place, only one point from idle Spectrum, by scoring three goals in the last 15 minutes for a 3-0 win over Mt. Douglas Rams. Ron McGovern, Charlie Davis and Henry Wong got the goals.

Belmont Braves earned their first win of the season when goals by Ernie Barbillian and Rick Reece gave them a 2-1 edge over Esquimalt Dockers. Pat Duncan scored for Esquimalt, which is bottom in the league.

And in Monday's other game, Mike Nosse scored 30 minutes into the second half to enable Parkland Panthers to hold Claremont Spartans to a 2-2 tie. Rudy Henry scored the other Parkland goal while Dave Scotney and doug Burns scored for Claremont.

FOREMAN RESUMES GYM, ROAD WORK

N'SELE, Zaire (AP) — World heavyweight champion George Foreman resumed gym work Monday after a two-week layoff with a cut over his right eye which forced postponement of his title defence against Muhammad Ali.

The fight, originally planned for Sept. 24, has been rescheduled for Oct. 30 in Kinshasa, Zaire.

Foreman, who appeared to have kept his weight down to near fighting trim, shadow boxed and hit the speed bag for five rounds.

"It feels good to be back in the ring again," he said. "I've been doing my roadwork for the past five days and when Dick Sadler says it's okay, we'll be sparring again."

Foreman, who was injured by Bill McMurray, his sparring partner, was examined Sunday by a World Boxing Council doctor and proclaimed fit for training.

It is not known when Sadler, his manager, will allow sparing again.

Tennis Wedding Delayed

PITTSFIELD, Mass. (AP) —The scheduled Nov. 8 wedding between Chris Evert and Jimmy Connors has been indefinitely postponed, the Berkshire Eagle of Pittsfield said Monday.

The newspaper quoted an Evert family source and said the delay was "due to the crush of an unyielding tennis schedule and a desire by both youngsters to slow down an onrushing wedding date."

First Club Crowns Won By Burrell and Howard

Youthful Keith Burrell and Ron Howard, Sr., are the first to wrap up club championships in the district.

Howard defeated veteran Bruce Pelmore 7 and 6 to capture Royal Colwood Golf Club's title on Sunday. Both won their way into the final with semi-final victories the previous day, Howard eliminating Gord Millin and Pelmore defeating Ted Colgate.

Burrell won Uplands' title for the first time with a 5 and 4 victory over Gord Pellow in their 36-hole playoff. At the same time, Mike Perks won the seniors' crown by defeating Carl Locatelli 4 and 3.

The finalists are now at Glen Meadows and Victoria while Cedar Hill and Gorge Vale's hopefuls are at or near the semi-finals.

Don Gowan, hoping to follow Al Robertson as the second junior to make it all the way, reached Glen Meadows' final by defeating Brian Sluggett 4 and 3. Gowan will face Marty Richads in the 36-hole playoff Oct. 12. Richards made it with a 6 and 5 decision over Gordon Perry.

Former B.C. Amateur champion Carl Schwantje and Gord Verley will play off for the Oak Bay title. Schwantje downed Mike Morrill 5 and 4 while Verley defeated Alex McCabe in the weekend's semi-finals.

Medallist Grant Milliken sidelined Ron Maxwell 2 and 1 and will face Cec Ferguson, who beat Urban Allen 5 and 4. Southpaw Bob Beauchemin, a 5 and 4 winner over Steve Allan, goes against Jeff Jones, who eliminated Gary Ferguson 7 and 6.

At Cedar Hill, Fred Worthington and Ron Griffis were first into the fours. Worthington upset Rick Truman 2 and 1 while Griffis edged John Furmstron one up.

Ken Morgan, Ray Saxon, Gordie Rands and Ron Stewart are other quarter-finalists as the club allows competitors two weeks in which to play their matches. Morgan and former champ Jim Girard figured in one of the more dramatic matches. They went eight extra holes before Morgan won out on the 26th hole.

The pros' top point-collectors are Bill Wakeham and Neil Murray of Cowichan, Norm Boden of March Meadows, Campbell River's Dave Ewart, and Victoria-area pros Mike Parker, Bryan Carbery, Al Zimmerman, Don Billsborough, Silverberg, Doug Mahovlic and Rob Ferguson. Ferguson, however, has reapplied for his amateur status and therefore will be ineligible and Uplands' Mike Buckley is designated as the first alternate.

Cec Ferguson, Beauchemin, Hunt, Richards, Milliken, Rands, Greg Barnes, Dave Mick, Rick Kent and Sandy Harper of Nanaimo are designated to start for the amateurs. Mike Gray of Uplands and Cowichan's Bert Wright are the first two alternates.

Foursomes play is scheduled for Saturday with the wrapup singles on Sunday.

Maple Leafs and a Hassle

MOSCOW (CP) — Maple Leafs sprouted on Red Square near Lenin's tomb Monday, and the effect for Team Canada 74 was almost enough to overcome a confusing hassle on arrival at Moscow's major airport.

For almost three hours, players and their wives were hung up, first to get off their Air Canada charter flight from Helsinki, second to get into the reception area, third to locate their baggage and fourth to put it on a bus for a ride of about 24 miles to the Rossiya Hotel in downtown Moscow.

At one point, Team Canada's manager, Bill Hunter of Edmonton, unleashed his famous temper. He told officials at the airport such confusion for a visiting team would not have been tolerated in Canada.

The Canadian team, close to normal after two exhibition games in three days during a respite from their eight-game international series, met Russia in game five today.

The four games in Canada ended with each team holding one victory and two ties.

Downtown, close to the three hotels in which Canadian fans are quartered, the red maple leaf — emblematic of the Canadian flag — was easy to spot Monday night.

Occasionally, cries of "Da, Da Canada, nyet, nyet Soviet," were heard. Passing Soviet citizens treated the Canadian demonstrations with good humor.

Team Canada's problems, although anticipated to some degree, were complicated when their plane was almost an hour late leaving Helsinki for the 85-minute flight.

As a result, the aircraft was forced into a holding pattern for another half hour and the plane landed at the same time three large international flights arrived.

There were estimates that about 4,000 persons were trying to use the airport facility at the same time.

Coach Billy Harris, as usual, refused to state his starting lineup for the game, but defensive specialist Bruce MacGregor was a doubtful starter.

The right winger, who has been playing with Mike Walton and Paul Henderson, missed an exhibition game Friday in Gothenburg, Sweden, because of a virus infection, he did not practise Saturday.

Goaltender Gerry Cheevers, although virtually certain to start, had an ailing groin muscle that might affect his lateral mobility. He aggravated the injury in Sunday's 4-3 victory over the Swedish national team.

He told one reporter the injury was bothering him, telling another that he was fine.

The sixth game Thursday will be televised in Canada over the CTV network starting at 9:30 a.m. PDT with seventh and eighth games Saturday and Sunday at 8 a.m. PDT.

Limping Kilmer On Target

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bill Kilmer, limping with a pulled calf muscle, tried unsuccessfully to tell everyone that he was only a small part of Washington Redskins' 30-3 victory Monday night over Denver Broncos.

"It was . . . the offence, the defence and the special teams," he said. "We didn't make any mistakes and they did.

Kilmer threw two touchdown passes to Charlie Taylor, including one early in the first quarter, to lead the Redskins in the National Football League game.

The win put the Redskins in a second-place tie with Philadelphia Eagles in the National Football Conference Eastern Division, each with 2-1 records, behind St. Louis, 3-0. The loss gave Denver a 0-2-1 record.

In addition to Kilmer's touchdown passes to Taylor, Mark Moseley kicked field goals of 37, 22, and 18 yards and Duane Thomas scored a touchdown with 11 seconds remaining to give the Redskins more total points than they have scored in two previous contests.

Denver's only score came on a 34-yard field goal by Jim Turner in the third quarter.

THE BULLION—THEN AND NOW

Mining for Old Memories

Fred McFetridge has a long and vivid memory that spans almost 10 decades. He will be 98 this winter.

He can recall people, places and things that others have long forgotten and his memory is particularly clear about mining.

A recent news story on the possibility of re-opening the Bullion Mine near Likely, sent him back to his notes and albums and what he calls a gap in the history of the mine.

The Bullion Mine in Dancing Bill's Gulch was one of the most spectacular and biggest placer mines in its heyday in Canada. It was managed by John B. Hobson who was brought to B.C. from California in 1892 by some directors of the Canadian Pacific Railway to examine the gold bearing gravels of the Cariboo area.

"The Bullion was a gigantic dig and Hobson took out millions in gold," said McFetridge. "The mine was idle for a while after 1906 because of lack of water for placer mining. It was opened up again in 1912 but attempts at rejuvenation failed until 1933 when it was acquired by Bullion Placers Ltd. under the management of Ray F. Sharpe."

And this is the gap where McFetridge came in. He was in a construction camp when Bullion approached him to be foreman.

When McFetridge arrived, about the only building standing was Hobson's Hotel.

"It had two large dining rooms and a gigantic range," he recalled, "but no water. The hotel burned down while I was there in 1935 and there was nothing we could do about it — the only water was for the cookhouse."

McFetridge left the mine before it closed in 1942 and it is his opinion that Sharpe overextended himself, ran out of gold completely and spent more than he ever took out.

"Sharpe wanted to beat Hobson's record and he really thought he could do it but he just went too big and there wasn't enough bullion to keep it alive."

McFetridge has little time for the promoters of some mines. He worked for a short time at Leech River on Vancouver Island and says it was strictly a promotional venture with no return.

Finally, after he was 65, Fred McFetridge found the happiest days of his life, building in Victoria. He built nine houses and duplexes and was still running around the construction rafters when he was in his 80s.

ICBC PLANS BODY SHOP

The Insurance Corp. of B.C. will open its own auto body shop and repair facilities in Prince George early next year.

Acting general manager Doug Scrivener, heading the corporation while Norm Bortnick is on a vacation said the shop will be in a building leased from a private company.

He said an independent study being conducted on body shops in the province will be used to give ICBC a yardstick on repair costs.

Results of the study are expected in October and Scrivener said ICBC is prepared to accept the study's recommendations on labor rates.

The Crown corporation originally negotiated an hourly labor rate of $14 with body shops on a province-wide basis, but since then a number of them have indicated they will raise their rates by today.

Body shop operators say their costs have increased sharply since the $14 rate was negotiated and they are having problems getting skilled staff.

"If a body shop owner says he needs $18 an hour from ICBC to make a reasonable profit, we are not sure that the owner's contention is valid," said Scrivener. "We feel this independent study will give us this information: if there are problems in body shop operations, we expect the study will pinpoint them."

In the meantime ICBC has reverted to a bid system and is paying the lowest estimate regardless of the hourly rate involved.

Meanwhile automotive body shop operators in Kamloops decided Monday to remain open but to do their own estimating.

Angus Currie, spokesman for the group, said the men decided to pool and provide a uniform estimate for any work done for the area's shops.

Talks Break Down Over BCGEU Pact

Negotiators have run into their first stumbling block in the first-ever contract talks between the provincial government and the 13 components of the B.C. Government Employees Union.

Talks have broken off between the government and the Administrative, Fiscal and Regulatory (AFR) component and the union has applied to the Labor Relations Board for the appointment of a mediation officer.

Larry Mann, chairman of the component, said the union "considers the only two issues in dispute" to be the government's refusal to agree to retroactive pay for the period between April 1 and Oct. 1 of this year and its attempt to "impose an inferior cost-of-living adjustment as agreed to for those components that have already settled."

Three other components have settled their individual contracts but the union is not releasing details of the agreements until all groups have settled. A master agreement covering general working conditions for public servants has already been signed.

Mann said application for mediation is the first step towards a strike, but "there are no plans at this time to take a strike vote."

The AFR component cover about 1,400 people including administrative officers, deputy sheriffs, system personnel, auditors, patrolmen and driver examiners.

Negotiations for the contracts began in early September.

Gov't Olympic Decision by Weekend

Supporters of the Vancouver-Garibaldi bid for the 1980 winter Olympics will know by the end of the week whether the provincial government will back them.

Resources Minister Bob Williams met once more members of the Vancouver-Garibaldi committee Monday and said the supporters presented him with more information to promote their cause.

The minister was non-commital after the meeting but said he was sure cabinet would make a decision before the end of this week.

Cabinet decided in August not to back the scheme but the group decided to go ahead with the bid and recently received a promise from Ottawa to allow the sale of coins and stamps to raise money for the sports event.

In light of the federal offer, Williams said he was willing to look at the bid again with "an open mind" but he did not go as far as to say the government would "reconsider" its stand.

Premier Barrett said Monday he was still personally opposed to the bid but he was willing to listen to any new proposals.

Asked about possible costs to B.C. taxpayers in light of the new federal offer, Williams said he did not "want to get into those arguments now."

MEXICANS NABBED IN OKANAGAN

KAMLOOPS (CP) — An immigration official here says the number of Mexican border-jumpers entering British Columbia has increased in the last few months.

Clare Scatchard said Monday that in the last two months, eight illegal immigrants were apprehended in B.C. between the Okanagan Valley and Fort St. John.

The official said they cross from Mexico into the United States to work as farm laborers and then slip over the Canadian border.

Harbor Bravery Awards for Four

VANCOUVER (CP) — Four men who helped prevent a potential waterfront disaster last January by towing a blazing, exploding Home Oil gasoline barge out of Coal Harbor were honored Monday by the Royal Canadian Humane Association.

Attorney-General Alex Macdonald presented bronze medals for bravery to Howie Keast, captain of the Lawrence L., relief captain Ken Arnison; and shore-based engine mechanics Raymond Smart and Ron Lowe.

Before making the presentation, Macdonald joked the men had broken the speed limit in Coal Harbor when they left their North Vancouver moorings and made the 2½-mile trip to the burning barge in eight minutes.

Three men died in the explosion.

A coroner's jury later ruled it was an accident.

Vancouver harbormaster Captain Roy Holland said the men "actually climbed on board the burning barge and played hoses on each other to cool the intense heat. I have a very high opinion of the whole towboat industry in the harbor."

NOTRE DAME STRIKE NOD

NELSON (CP) — The 50-member faculty association served 72-hour strike notice Monday in its contract dispute with Notre Dame University. A central issue in negotiations is a faculty request to restructure the university's committee system. The faculty wants to choose its own chairman for the academic committee which acts as an academic senate in making policy and approving courses.

'Big Brother' Hired

Victoria's office of Big Brothers of B.C. hired a full-time worker Sept. 16, whose salary will be made available through this year's donations to United Appeal.

The appeal began to provide funds to the group on July 1.

Newly-hired Wayne Gardiner "is trying to match big and little brothers," he said, and stimulate more men's interest in the work of the group.

"Most people feel you have to be married or well off" to be a big brother, said Gardiner, but time is what the fatherless boys need most.

With a minimum of four hours a week and often no money at all a man can be a valuable brother to a boy, he said.

"It's really heartbreaking," he said, "that Big Brothers get so many requests for help from boys and so few offers from prospective brothers."

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A man who put his finger to the forehead of a cocktail waitress and said "you're dead baby" pleaded guilty in provincial court Monday to common assault.

Richard Daniel Ryser, 21, of 741 Daffodil, made the comment Sept. 10 as he was leaving the Royal Oak Inn, 4676 Elk Lake.

Ryser had been asked to leave, Prosecutor Gordon Macdonald said, because he had been making remarks to customers of the inn and using profane language.

As he was leaving he also said, "you'll all be dead by Friday."

He and his friends were going to return with a gun and kill everyone.

Macdonald said the waitress had received three threatening phone calls the week following the incident.

She was under police guard.

"I'm sorry I got out of hand," Ryser told the court.

He was remanded to Oct. 18 for sentencing.

For possessing marijuana, Gaston Joseph Blanchet, 21, of no fixed address, Richard Roger Laberge, 21, also of no fixed address, and William Charles Joseph McKenzie, 24, of 7816 East Saanich, were each fined $75.

In traffic court six persons were fined for impaired driving:

Arnold Robert White, 44, of 120 Gorge, was fined $350 and banned from driving for 40 days; Bryan Gordon McEdwards, 23, of 440 Frazer, was fined $350 and banned 30 days; Gordon James Mitchell 38, of 1895 John, was fined $350; Raymond Fortier, 37, of 1023 Wurtele, was fined $325 and banned for 50 days; John Brett, 27, of 3149 Orillia, was fined $350 and banned 40 days, and Peter Henry London, 32, of 10775 McDonald Park, was fined $350 and banned for 40 days.

Harry Eric Liddle, 31, of 2664 Scott, was fined $350 and banned from driving for 50 days for being in the care or control of a motor vehicle while impaired, and Brent Dale Woodruff, 22, of 1554 Hillside, was fined $250 and banned a month for driving with a blood-alcohol level more than .08 per cent. He was fined another $175 and banned another month for failing to remain at the scene of an accident.

'Professionals Taking Over'

James Bay 'People' Warned by School Trustee

Professionals seem to be "taking over" James Bay's community movement, Greater Victoria school board trustee Walter Donald told community leaders Monday.

"Every time I come to talk about James Bay I meet mostly professional social workers and I must tell you I am suspicious," Donald said at a meeting of the board and James Bay leaders.

"It seems to me that now the professionals are taking over and it's hurting you," he said.

The James Bay spokesmen, who had come to discuss their plans to integrate health, education, recreation and social services in the area, denied this was happening.

"I don't think the people in the community are ever going to let the professionals take over," said Lorne De Girolamo, a community development worker hired by the James Bay Community Association with government funds, and a James Bay resident.

He said professionals became involved in James Bay community activity very early, but the real impetus for action came from the citizens themselves.

De Girolamo praised agencies like James Bay community school and the human resources department saying they "have just opened their doors to us."

DONALD
". . . I am suspicious"

"That place is like walking into someone's home," he said of the human resources department.

The community association's plans for integrated services, which are estimated will cost $1.6 million in capital expenditure, include such things as expanding the school library so the whole community can use it.

Any request for money to expand James Bay school facilities or increase staff to aid the community project must be made by the school board, so the commmunity leaders hope to involve the board in their planning.

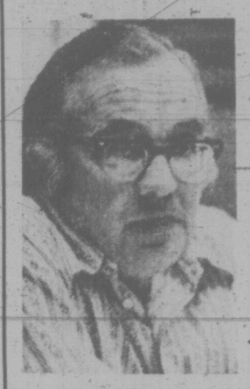
They invited the board to join them in forming a joint planning committee, a invitation the trustees did not pick up on.

Trustees pointed out they have 59 schools to be concerned about, not just James Bay community school.

And James Bay school has already received "preferred treatment" by being given extra staff to help organize the community education program, superintendent of schools Jake Longmore said.

The James Bay integration project is one of four such pilot projects being developed in B.C. All integration projects are under the guidance of a group of experts called the Development Group, who act on behalf of the provincial government.

James Bay is the only pilot project that hopes to integrate education as well as health and social services.



LEVI

Boys Found

Two youngsters missing since Sunday while hiking in the Ladysmith-Chemainus area were found at 10:30 a.m. Monday none the worse for their overnight experience in the bush.

An RCMP helicopter found the pair — Brent Sobjerg, 14, and Darrell Watson, 10 — near Silver Lake where they had camped in an abandoned cabin.

Priors Leaving Forest

The Prior family will be moved from its crude forest home as soon as funeral arrangements are made for their two-year-old son Yehudi, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said today.

But he declined to say where.

Levi said a medical examination of the couple's second child, two-month-old Pollen had found him in "very good health."

Meanmhile, in Duncan, acting coroner Dr. R. R. Wilson said an inquest will be held into the death of the child.

He said viewing of the body will take place in Duncan tonight at which time an autopsy report will be released and a date set for the inquest, probably sometime within in the next two or three weeks.

The youngster's nude body was found at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in a little spring of water under a log 10 feet from Holt Creek and about four miles from his parent's camp, nine miles northwest of Shawnigan Village.

He had been missing since Monday afternoon.

Cowichan search and rescue spokesman Hal Orrick said he believed the child died that night after stumbling into the spring.

He said the child must have wandered over a small ridge and into the next valley down to Holt Creek, perhaps thinking it was Wild Deer Creek where he lived.

"There were footprints on the logging road near where we found him.

"If we had been called in Monday afternoon when he was first missing I might have driven that way and seen him on the road."

Yehudi's parents, William 25, and Ann, 24, reported the child's disappearance to police Monday but declined offers for assistance saying they thought they could find the child themselves.

JORDAN

Const. Jim Harrison of Shawnigan Lake RCMP said officers and tracking dogs will begin today to try to retrace Yehudi's movements from the time he went missing.

The tragedy has sparked an emotion-packed telegram to Levi from Social Credit welfare critic Pat Jordan.

She called for a complete investigation into the matter and cited other cases of child tragedies involving Levi's department in the past month.

"I demand you hold a public inquiry, into these shocking tragedies and all aspects of your administration," she said.

Jordan said the other tragedies she was referring to involved a baby thrown off a B.C. Ferry after a human resources official was notified of the mother's unstable condition, and the case of a child beaten to death in Vancouver after reports of abuse had been made to social workers.

For the next few days the Prior family will continue to live in their retreat carved out of the rugged wilderness last winter.

Development Area Studied By Esquimalt

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Major development may be in store for 25 acres of privately-owned land on the northwest boundary of Esquimalt, Ald. Terry Prentice said today.

Prentice said Esquimalt council is considering declaring the land between Admirals Road and the railroad tracks a development area and "indications are that it would allow higher density developments."

Current regulations restrict density to duplex and Prentice expects favorable reaction from the property owners involved.

A public information meeting, chaired by Prentice, is slated for Oct. 9, at 7:30 p.m., at the municipal hall.

Prentice said an application by Pine Home Builders Ltd. — to have two parcels of land there declared a development area allowing a 50-unit townhouse — sparked the move.

Developer Chris Pike has promised that current duplex density will be maintained if the development is allowed on the five-acre parcel.

But Prentice said that "rather than rezone each property piece by piece or rezone the whole area we're looking at declaring the entire site a development area so someone can come up with a proposal and between the two of us — council and the residents — we can decide on it."

Prentice said council was approached by area residents about four years ago.

"They were being pressured to sell their land then by developers. Council's attitude at that time was: it's your property . . . come up with a proposal and we'll look it."

"This way council can assess proposed development in terms of the long term development of the municipality."

Sidney Urged to Back Regional Water Plan

The best way for Sidney to shore up its overtaxed water supply is to pass the regional plan and then let the whole region be responsible for water services, Capital Region Board chairman Jim Campbell said Monday.

Campbell said if the regional plan passed, the board could change its letters patent to allow it to supply water, a function it cannot legally do now.

Campbell's suggestion met with opposition, skepticism and outright anger from members of Sidney council and some citizens at a public meeting Monday called to find out what Sidney thinks of the plan.

But residents with definite views on the plan were in the minority. Most of the crowd of about 50 came to listen, not talk.

Mayor Stan Dear said only two people had taken up Sidney council's invitation to go to municipal hall and have a look at the regional plan and some citizens at the meeting were unsure exactly what the regional board was.

Campbell took a few minutes to explain, saying the board was not a provincial government department and that its members were elected, not appointed.

If residents' views of the plan were unclear, council members left no doubt they oppose the plan.

Dear said the regional board was imposing the plan on Sidney, and then leaving it up to the municipality to implement it.

"It's like the regional board telling me to buy a Datsun and then leaving it up to me how to drive it. What if I don't want a Datsun in the first place?"

Council's main oppostiion to the plan is that it limits population to 9,500 by the year 2,001. Council contends it needs a greater population to be able to bring in the badly-needed water line from the Greater Victoria system. Development in Sidney has been frozen for almost year, pending increased water supply.

Campbell said the solution to the water problem is to establish a regional plan which sets the growth for the area and then shift the responsibility to the region as a whole to supply the services.

"After you make the decision on where the region will grow, then you make sure that the people here now and the people who are going to stay here, get water," Campbell said.

Campbell was accused of selling Sidney a "bill of goods" on the regional plan of pushing the plan through by himself.

"It's flattering you think I have that kind of power," he said," but I just live on a farm and come over here two days a week.

"I'm not a very successful dictator," he joked.

Mayor Dear said Sidney has established its own community plan three years ago with a forecast population of about 12,000.

"What we want is the regional plan to accept Sidney's own plan," Dear said.

Campbell said council should make its feelings known by way of amendments to the regional plan.

AUTO RAMS MAIL BOXES

Two 20-year-olds will appear in Sidney provincial court Monday charged with mischief, following the destruction of between 10 and 15 mailboxes and signs on Bowerbank and Courser Drive early this morning.

Sidney RCMP said about $400 damage was done when a car rammed the boxes.

Winner Stands Grounds

He's the best and the most modest.

Saanich was well represented by officials when the municipality received the Park and Tilford Trophy at the Bayshore Inn in Vancouver.

The award, for which more than 60 entries were submitted from all across the province, was for the beautification of the four acres on which the municipal hall stands.

In addition to the all-season gardens, the grounds contain a putting green, pools and streams.

He flatly refused to go over and accept the award.

Janitors' Meet Set for Sunday

Janitors employed by the Greater Victoria school board will meet this Sunday night to decide what action to take in the long-simmering dispute over "rating" of schools to equalize workloads.

Bob Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said because of the attitude of the men . . . "it is no longer available to us to delay any longer. We'll let the members decide."

He said the janitors will decide at the meeting, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Union Centre, whether to start a study session, walkout, "or whatever."

Condominium Site Approved

Saanich council Monday night approved a land-use contract which will permit Penthouse Development Ltd. to build 18 single-storey retirement condominiums on Cedar Hill between McKenzie and Arrow.

Architect Gerald Sager said the units would sell between $35,000 and $40,000.

"Terms of the contract are very rigid," Mayor Ed Lum assured Turner. "No changes will be allowed."

Lum said land-use contracts were the best control municipalities had over new developments.

Applications for duplexes at 3396 Salisbury Way, the corner of Primrose and Gladiola and 4111 Marigold were approved.

In spite of Ald. Sandy Noel's contention that "something more imaginative in the design" was needed for five townhouses proposed for 1006 Falmouth, council approved W. A. Frebold's bid to build the units on the three-lot site.

HO-HUM ATTITUDE HAUNTS HEARINGS

Provincial government hearings on pre-paid contracts will begin in Victoria on Thursday, but there may be little response to the call for submissions from the public.

Similar hearings in New Westminster last week attracted only three people and no briefs were presented to the three-member committee set up by the provincial consumer affairs department to investigate the problems of pre-paid contracts.

A member of the Victoria branch of the Consumer Association of Canada said Monday as far as she knew her organization was not planning to attend.

William Kinsey, chairman of the committee, said last week he was surprised at the lack of response in light of extensive advertising.

The committee will be at the Carlton Club in Esquimalt from 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday and at the Red Lion Inn, from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Friday.

Boys Charged With Entries

Two 15-year-old boys were to appear in Victoria juvenile court today charged with breaking into four homes in the Blenkinsop and MacKenzie area Monday.

Saanich detectives said they were caught breaking into one of the homes when a neighbor saw them and called police.

Ask The Times

Q: While I was strolling along the beach I came upon what looks like a Chinese cemetery. It looks like a huge waste of good land, as is Ross Bay cemetery. Why did our forebears pick such places for these cemeteries, putting them so close to the sea instead of situating them outside of the communities? Will these cemeteries ever be put to better use or will they be there forever? J. E. R.

A: Ross Bay cemetery is still used and it's doubtful there will be any drastic change because, since it was established in 1872 hundreds of British Columbia notables have been buried there, including Emily Carr, Sir James Douglas, Victoria's first mayor Thomas Harris and Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, "the hanging judge."

The Chinese cemetery at Harling Point was established many years ago by the Chinese Consolidation Benevolent Association and is still owned and operated by the association, although it has not been used as a burial ground for many years. Association spokesman Peter Wong says at one time there was a bid to make the cemetery into a memorial park and there is still a possibility this could be done.

Both cemeteries were established when Victoria was a much smaller city and, in those years, would have been far from the centre of the town.

Shelter Lacks 'Approval' Proof

A search of diocesan records failed to turn up evidence of approval for Mother Cecilia's animal shelter as a religious undertaking, B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

Msgr. Michael T. O'Connell, former chancellor of Victoria diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, was giving evidence for the defence in the fourth week of a trial brought against the Society of the Love of Jesus by Mother Cecilia and four other sisters for control of the society.

O'Connell said he searched the files of Bishop William Hill, then head of the diocese, for the approval of Mother Cecilia's animal work, which she alleged Hill gave before his death. But none was found, the priest said.

The church has argued Good Shepherd Shelter has operated without sanction since it was founded in 1962 following Mother Cecilia's departure from St. Mary's Priory at Colwood, which is still the chief work of the society.

Much of the evidence entered by both sides in the case is documentary, going back 10 years, and to date 340 exhibits have been entered. The plaintiffs are trying to prove they are still bona fide members of the society, while the defence maintains they forfeited their standing by such acts and omissions as ignoring the rule of their society and their vows of obedience.

O'CONNELL
. . . made search

O'Connell said when Bishop Remi de Roo returned from the Vatican council in 1965 he began implementing a decree concerning the concept of obedience. There was to be more regard for the good of the outside community relating to the work of the religious community, achieved through dialogue and not dictatorially as before, O'Connell said.

People in religious communities were to take a more active part in the life of the church ecumenically, to become involved with social gestures and to combine with other communities if there was need for new life, "new blood," as he put it.

One of the results locally was by opening Queenswood and Colwood religious communities to outside activities as the sisters offered their buildings for use by workshops and conferences, court was told.

Meanwhile, a sister from another Benedictine community in Yankton, South Dakota, was brought in as prioress of the Colwood group Leonette Hoesing—who began testifying Monday afternoon.

It was expected the trial would continue through this week, with night sittings scheduled for Thursday and Friday, Mr. Justice H. C. McKay said he has other commitments Oct. 15 and he hoped counsel would take this into consideration.

dear abby

Exhibitionist Cured

DEAR ABBY: I read the letter from "Scared," the 19-year-old girl who just found out that her steady boyfriend had been arrested several times for indecent exposure.

Thank you for your compassionate and understanding attitude. You said, "It's an illness. He needs therapy." Abby, you are so right.

I am a 28-year-old man who was cursed with that illness for about 15 years. It's called "exhibitionism." And it's as difficult to control as alcoholism. In plain language, it's an uncontrollable urge to expose oneself.

I was normal in all other respects and couldn't understand this fierce urge. I seemed powerless to control. I won't go into the humiliation, problems with the law and tremendous guilt feelings I suffered until I finally found a psychologist who knew how to treat this illness. He used the "conditioning" technique, and it cured me.

I have been married for five years to a woman who stood by me through the worst. She gave me the courage to seek professional help, and the strength to stick with the treatment. Had it not been for her, I could not be signing myself. —Ex-Exhibitionist

P.S. Abby, because I trust you, and know that you will not betray that trust, I am signing my real name and address. If you print my letter, please don't divulge my name or location. Although I am cured, and, God willing, will never regress, I am still ashamed of my past.

DEAR EX: Because I feel that an unenlightened society has misunderstood this problem for years I shall print your letter.

Perhaps in an effort not to seem self-serving, you failed to mention an important fact: Exhibitionists are usually gentle, non-violent people, and the chances of their attacking anyone are very, very remote.

But in fairness to society, exhibitionists cannot be allowed to go about traumatizing children and shocking adults.

Those who sincerely wish to overcome their problem have an excellent chance of being helped, either by psychotherapy or conditioned reflex therapy. I urge those who are still fighting this battle to seek out such help.

DEAR ABBY: I am a woman who is very much in love with a man who says he loves me, but I can't seem to hang on to him. He disappears for weeks at a time and I don't know how to locate him. When he is gone I just about go crazy. He is gone now.

I went to a spiritual person who does healing, reads palms, and communicates with people who are far away. She says she can help me get my man back for good, but first I have to sign up for a program which costs $50 for the first session, and $10 every two weeks after that.

I don't have a lot of money, but I would sure pay that much to get my man back. Should I sign up? Louisiana

DEAR LA: Save your money and report that "spiritual person" to the Better Business Bureau and the Bunco Division of your local police department.

If your man loves you, you won't need a third party to get him back. He'll COME back.

DEAR ABBY: "Stumped Divorcee" didn't know how to say "no" to a man. (She said, "If I had never been married, I could say I was saving myself for marriage, but a divorcee can't say that.")

I have a solution for her: I was a divorcee for ten years. I never said "no" to a man because I didn't want him to think I was a prude. And I never said "yes" because I didn't want him to think I was a tramp. So I always said "maybe."

It worked like a charm. I had so many proposals I couldn't count them.

I am now married to the greatest guy in the world. —The Maybe Girl.

DEAR MAYBE: I can only assume that your "maybe" turned into a "yes." What was the time schedule on that?

CONFIDENTIAL to Red: Tell her the truth. She'll never believe it.

Although no one knows exactly how many moose there are in Canada, according to estimates they number more than half a million.

The 4-page folder "Moose" says that a bull moose stands taller at the shoulder than the largest saddle horse and weighs up to 1,800 pounds.

Moose have a fascinating life story. Although a calf is helpless at birth, after a few days it can outrun a man and swim well. The moose calf gains weight faster than any other big-game animal. During its first month it puts on 1-2 pounds per day. Later, for a time, it may gain five pounds a day.

The folder also points out that each winter day an adult moose consumes 40 to 50 pounds of twigs. In summer it eats 50 to 60 pounds of forage (leaves, shrubs, plants etc.).

Surprisingly, moose also feel at home in the water. They sometimes dive as much as 18 feet for food that grows at the bottom of a lake. They have also been known to swim 12 miles.

According to the folder, an insufficient supply of food is a major hazard facing the moose, often resulting in malnutrition or starvation.

The average moose population in a forest is one or two animals per square mile.

Alvarez-Welch Medical Report

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

I just read in an Associated Press release that 483 persons were killed in auto accidents during the U.S. Labor Day holiday period. Last year, in a similar holiday, 559 people were killed. The record number was in 1968, when 688 persons were killed in 78 hours.

Apparently the new 55-mile speed limit is doing some good in lowering the number of deaths on the highways.

NEW INSTRUMENTS

I just saw in a booklet from the American Hospital Association a picture of the outer end of a huge new type of "linear accelerator" such as is used in the treatment of cancer. The rays that come out of it are much more powerful than are those that come out of an X-ray apparatus, hence it is to be hoped that they will do much more in the way of killing cancer cells, and curing patients with that dread disease.

SEARCH FOR A CURE

I am happy to see that there is a new Public Affairs Pamphlet entitled "Can We Conquer Cancer?" by Dr. Clifton R. Read, who reports on the tremendous efforts now being made to conquer cancer.

There are many fine laboratories throughout the country where work is being done. Unfortunately, no one knows what particular approach to the problem will eventually someday bring results; there are so many ways of looking for a cancer cure. Every year hundreds of drugs are tested on small animals with cancer, and today there are a number of drugs which are helpful in stopping or slowing down the disease.

For instance, cancer of the blood-forming organs (leukemia), which attacks mainly children, used to kill within a year. Now a number of patients are living up to nine years and some apparently are getting well when treated in certain ways. It is possible that before we get a cure we will find a drug that will prevent cancer from starting to grow—a vaccine.

One problem is that oftentimes a person will have alarming symptoms, such as bleeding from the rectum, or a lump in a breast, or a cough, and yet will not go to a doctor for months.

Also what is sad is that some cancers are due to some element in the person's job or contacts with life. For instance, anyone who works with ambestos dust or who smokes many cigarettes, or who perhaps works with x-rays, and hence gets much contact with radiation, after some years may get a cancer.

Today many people could avoid death with cancer by going for an examination every year. For instance, the incidence of cancer of the neck of the womb in women has now dereased markedly because of the Pap test. With that, cells taken from the neck of the womb are studied under the microscope by an expert who can recognize cancer. It is the woman over the age of 40 who especially needs watchful care. Men also should get an annual proctological (rectal) examination.

Also, whenver a person past 40 gets a new pain somewhere, a pain that he never had before, he had better hurry to see his doctor. Many years ago that very wise physician, Dr. W. J. Mayo, decided that the best way to keep his associate doctors from dying from cancer was to have them examined each year. Hence it was that during all my 25 years at the Clinic, every year I had a thorough examination with x-ray examinations of my lungs, stomach, and bowel.

One of my dear friends on the staff at the Clinic avoided having this yearly examination. When he got a rather painful indigestion, he was so sure it was due to the gallstones he had that he didn't do anything. Unfortunately, when it became obvious that what he had was a cancer of the stomach, it was too late to save him, and within two months he was dead.

Recently, the geat Cancer Research Laboratories at Roswell Park Memorial Institute in Buffalo, New York, reported that in 1897 when the laboratory was started, few patients with cancer had any hope for a cure. Even by the late 1930's, no more than one in five was being saved.

Since 1956, the ratio had been one in three, or under optimum circumstances, one in two. Obviously, cancer research has brought life and health to millions of people.

Junk Foods Condemned

FREDERICTON (CP) — New Brunswick dentists are seeking replacement of soft drink and chocolate bar dispensing machines in the province's schools for the sake of good dental health.

The New Brunswick Dental Society at a meeting passed a motion condemning such machines, and urged their replacement with dispensers of milk, sandwich, and other non tooth-decaying food.

The resolution said soft drink and chocolate bar machines encouraged a poor diet and could only "increase the incidence of dental disease among out school population."

Madagascar Madness

"Where is Madagascar?" my son asked me one night last week.

"It's no wonder you can't find it" I muttered absently. "That room of yours is a disgrace."

"Madagascar is a place," he replied, witheringly. "I have to do a dumb report on it."

"It won't do you any good if I just tell you where Madagascar is," I parried quickly. "Look for it on the globe."

I recently chose a globe, rather than six wooden-handled steak knives, as a gift for opening a savings account. I consider a globe to be an essential learning tool, especially since we can't afford steak any more. When I was a child we didn't have a globe, only an atlas. Until I was twelve, I envisioned the earth as being long and flat, with a staple in the middle.

"I can't find it," my son complained handing me the globe.

"Madagascar," I mused under by breath. "Wasn't that the name of an old Humphrey Bogart movie?"

"That was Casablanca," my son snorted.

Now in order to locate Madagascar it is virtually essential to have a general idea of what continent it is in. For all I knew Madagascar was an emerging nation and was shown on all globes over two years ago as Zenophobia.

New countries like Madagascar should be legally required to send out gummed stickers to place over their old names. Borders of countries constantly in turmoil could be printed in washable ink and redrawn after every dispute.

I ran my forefinger idly over a lump which was either Mount Everest or a piece of caramel. "I don't suppose that you'd consider doing your dumb report on Kamsack, Saskatchewan, instead?"

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Forecast for Weds., October 2

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Quick action affects areas associated with legalities, partnerships, long-range commitments, including marriage. You find who is to stay, what must go and what you can do about it. In effect, a part of emotional rug is pulled from under you. But you do land on your feet.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): What you see may be a surface indication. Older individual may want to extract pound of flesh. Be on guard against Trojan horses. Do what must be done and don't expect something for nothing. Capricorn, Cancer could be in picture.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Some friends, hopes and wishes are subject to sudden changes, revisions. You finish rather than begin — what was a burden is removed. But you draw to you fiery individuals who have complaints and demand response.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You learn costs. You also know what to do about situation which has been blocking progress. Leo, Aquarius individuals figure prominently. Be independent. Refuse to be bogged down by tradition. Instead, begin creating your own traditions!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You understand motives and perceive methods. But conditions are not right for complete break, revision or radical change. Patience is your ally — and so is a grown-up attitude. Conserve energies. Prepare for future with creative savings program.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Diversify. Highlight versatile approach to questions. Gemini, Sagittarius are in picture. Money and how it got that way — that is likely to occupy you. Answers are obtainable if you put forth proper queries.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Creative changes are featured. Some may fear your goals, motives, methods. Key is to adhere to style and principles. Ignore thost who insist only on dwelling in past. Do some remodelling — tear down for purpose of rebuilding.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Basic procedures get a shake-up. You find that inquisitive people ask a number of questions. In providing answers, you learn — and grow. Gemini, Virgo individuals figure prominently. You are able to piece together parts of a puzzle.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romance, creative pursuits are featured. Young person may appear to make unreasonable demands. Key is to make compromise without abandoning principles. Keep peace on domestic front. Unorthodox associate creates "minor havoc."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Emphasis is on past and how to free yourself. Means don't feel that what went before must continue for an eternity. Become your own person — and start now! A mistake need not be compounded. A loss could boomerang to your ultimate profit.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Pull forces together. Emphasize strong points. Experienced individual will give you benefit of doubt. You receive vote of confidence. Show appreciation by money management, promotion, organizing campaign.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): If you finish project, you avoid financial loss. If you insist on premature start, you invite embarrassment, financial and otherwise. The choice is your own. Aries, Libra could be in picture. Prove point by advertising, publicizing your efforts.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, moody, sensual, fond of food and cooking — you tend to be extravagant, to indulge yourself and you are fiercely loyal to family. Change of residence or lifestyle occurred this year, with emphasis in September. Your most significant months this year: February and November. You draw to you persons born under Cancer and Capricorn.

Megavitamin Criticisms 'False, Biased'

EDMONTON (CP) — I. J. Kahan of Regina says that scientific studies which have shown huge doses of vitamins are worthless in the treatment of mental disease are false and biased.

Kahan, general director of the Canadian Schizophrenia Foundation and a social worker who assisted in what he said was the first scientific study proving the effectiveness of the megavitamin treatment, said contradictory studies failed to use correct dosages and standards in assessing results.

He was in Edmonton to attend a public meeting called by the foundation's Edmonton branch to raise more opposition to the Alberta College of Physicians and Surgeons ruling that megavitamins should be restricted to experimental use.

Kahan, in an interview, said scientific studies around the world may not all have been biased but they did fail to appreciate the full complexity of the therapy.

"Any study that followed the recipe closely got very positive results," he said. "But many didn't bother to study how to do it and just gave patients niacin."

He cited a Montreal study in which schizophrenic patients were given three grams of niacin each day for three months.

"But we know it needs to be varied, someone may need two or 12 grams a day, and three months is not long enough," Kahan said.

"It takes six months, a year or two years," he said adding that megavitamin therapists now use several vitamins and trace elements, not just one.

He said the study in which he was involved between 1953 and 1957 showed megavitamin therapy was superior to conventional treatments in use at that time.

About 300 patients were tested, with Saskatchewan government support, and those receiving megavitamins did much better.

Kahan said there were four suicides among the patients not receiving megavitamins while there were none in the group receiving the therapy.

Because megavitamin therapy, also known as orthomolecular medicine, now is being used to treat "related conditions" such as asthma and hypoglycemia-low blood sugar, Kahan said the 2,000-member foundation is considering changing its name to the orthomolecular foundation.

SIBLINGS REUNITED AFTER LONG BREAK

ST. AGATHA, Ont. (CP) — Ray Wilson remembers standing on a Kitchener street in 1938, waving and crying as his little brother and sister were taken away for adoption.

An aunt had tried to keep the six children together but it was too much for her.

But recently the children, ranging in age from six months to 15 years when an automobile crash killed their parents, held a reunion at the home of the oldest brother Doug, now 38.

"When you're brother and sister you just have to look at each other and you know," said Ray, a 28-year-old Guelph, Ont. carpenter.

He, Doug and Bob, now 30, were too old for adoption when the family was orphaned. They went through a variety of foster homes, always keeping in touch with one another until Bob moved to Vancouver in 1965.

It took the family baby, 16-year-old Debbi now Cathy Thomas of Cambridge, Ont. to instigate the reunion.

After two years of letters and telephone calls to find everybody, Doug and Ray took Debbie to see James now Patrick Downey and their sister Kathy, both adopted by the same Chatham, Ont. family.

The situation was tense, recalled Doug.

"Do you like me? That's what you want to say. It's the uppermost thing on your mind. But you can't say it."

"We all cried," said Ray. "There were tears, tears and more tears."

Late Marriage 'Suggested'

family

By CHARLES SMITH

HONG KONG (UPI) — In China, love is a proletarian thing.

Love, according to the thought of Mao Tse-tung, is only an illusion that must be subordinated to the needs of society.

And this means late marriage, based on planning and political ideology rather than impetuousness and puppy love.

Although the legal age of consent under China's marriage law is 18 for women and 20 for men, the "suggested" ages under the campaign for late marriages are from 25 to 27 for women and 27 to 30 for men.

Young people, Communist party directives say, should not be carried away with emotions and the illusion of love or that a hasty marriage brings happiness.

"It is impermissible to define happiness in a general or abstract manner or to look for answers to the question of happiness from the individual viewpoint," one commentary on late marriage said. "The word happiness cannot be discussed abstractly. Happiness is a historical notion and has a historical and class content . . . it is therefore necessary to sacrifice the interests of the individual to the interests of the whole."

A recent women's congress in Fukien province discussed the question of love and marriage.

"We must foster the proletarian concept of love," a resolution adopted by the congress said. "Both young men and women must link their own ideal and future with the construction of a socialist new countryside.

"It is necessary to practice late marriage and planned parenthood so that vigorous energy can be concentrated on grasping revolution and promoting production.

"The promotion of late marriage and planned parenthood is in itself a revolution in society which aims at changing the existing habits and customs."

The same theme has been repeated in scores of other women's congress sessions throughout the country this year.

"It is necessary to handle the problems of love and marriage with proletarian thinking; energetically promote late marriage and planned parenthood," a typical resolution by the Hupeh Women's Congress said.

Hou Sheng-li, 30, a commune worker in Shensi province, had the right idea. He resisted parental pressures to take a wife and raise a family while he was in his early twenties.

After convincing his own parents the party was correct, Hou went to work on his bride-to-be and her parents.

According to a report in the Communist Party newspaper, "he visited the home of his fiancee many times to carry out ideological work on his fiancee" which was so effective that when they finally were wed, "the bride broke away from former traditions, and not long after the (wedding) ceremony, took part right away in gathering manure and gave an inspiration to the women of the whole production brigade."

Acupuncture 'No Cure-All'

EDMONTON (CP) — Acupuncture has at least five disadvantages which make it less than a cure-all for pain and suffering, Dr. J. W. McIntyre, a university of Alberta professor of anesthesia, told the Alberta Medical Association. He listed five disadvantages to the technique:

The insertion and repeated stimulation of the needles hurts.

It is not applicable to all types of operations and patients, especially children, and is being used in only about 40 per cent of Chinese operations.

It does not relax muscles or remove reflex reactions such as nausea if a sensitive spot inside the body is touched.

It does not provide a complete anesthetic.

Food Prices Review Board Issues Pessimistic Report

The Food Prices Review Board's latest Quarterly Report says that further increases in food prices are ahead for the Canadiasn consumer before the end of the year.

"Contrary to earlier expectations, the upward pressure on food prices cannot now be expected to abate for some time to come. Two factors account for this pessimistic outlook," the report states.

First, it says, all of the major industrial countries, including Canada, have experienced a deterioration in the overall inflation this year relative to last.

"Because a substantial portion of final food cost is accured beyond the farm gate, the general inflationary environment can itself have significant effect on food prices, quite apart from what is happening to producer prices.

"Second, poor weather has caused this year's crop production to fall short of expectations. Relative to the growing world requirement for food, the latest crop information for North America and for a number of overseas countries is indeed gloomy.

"Present expectations are that world grain production will be lower this year than it was in 1973. The consequences of such a drop this year, following so soon after the decline in 1972, are potentially very serious because of very low levels of grain in storage."

In the first eight months of 1974, Canadian retail prices of food for home consumption climbed 12 per cent from their level last December. In the remaining four months, a further increase of about 3 per cent may be expected.

"By year end, retail food prices could be in the neighbourhood of 15 per cent above their year-earlier level," the report states.

Rising prices for bread and milk, both of which have substantial shares in average family food expenditures, are expected to be key factors behind the impending food price increases. There will likely be some moderating influences. For example, the price of beef is expected to ease downward from recent levels, it says.

SOLUTION WEDNESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

The text books tell us that when one possesses two or three low cards in partner's bid, suit, he should lead the higher of the two, and the highest of the three. And if one has four or more cards in partner's bid suit, he should lead the fourth-from-the-highest.

But there are days when rules must be disobeyed if the best result is to be achieved. Today's deal is a case in point. The hand came up in the National Championship of 1974. Sitting West was Lew Mathe, of Los Angeles. Both sides vulnerable. East deals.

Both sides vulnerable. East deals.

♥ AJ82
♦ KQ1076

WEST	EAST
♠ Q8642	♠ AKJ10
♥ 953	♥ K74
♦ 852	♦ 943
♣ 43	♣ A95

SOUTH
♥ Q106
♦ AJ
♣ KQJ10762

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ♠	3 ♣	Pass	3 ♦
Pass	4 ♣	Pass	5 ♣
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♠.

South's jump overcall of three clubs showed, systemically, a hand containing 16-18 points, and a real good club suit of six or seven cards. North's eventual raise to five clubs was a fine call, with the final contract being an excellent one.

Had Mathe made the normal, orthodox lead of the four of spades, declarer would have fulfilled his contract with ease. East would have captured this trick with his king. Assuming that East then returned the spade ace (no other return could have altered the outcome) declarer would have ruffed.

A top trump would then have been led, East taking his ace. Upon capturing whatever East played back, declarer would then have picked up the outstanding trumps. After cashing his ace and jack of diamonds, declarer would have entered dummy via the heart ace, and on dummy's two top diamonds he would have discarded his ten and queen of hearts. His only losers would have been a spade and a club.

Mathe, looking at his hopeless hand, knew that after he made the opening lead he would never again be on lead. So he led the queen of spades, hoping that it would win the trick. And if it did, he would be guided by dummy as to what he should lead to trick two. When the queen won the trick, he shifted to a heart at trick two. No matter what declarer played from his dummy, he could not prevent East from making his heart king, for the setting trick.

Each distinct letter in this very easy addition stands for a particular but different digit.

Start by deciding what digit the letter S must represent, and from that you'll get the value of the letter D. Then it should only take a moment to find SAYS.

Packers Sign Miami Veteran

GREEN BAY, Wis. (AP) — Green Bay Packers, seeking more speed in their offensive backfield have obtained six year National Football League veteran Charlie Leigh on waivers from Miami Dolphins. Leigh, 29, rushed 22 times for 134 yards as the Dolphins' fourth running back behind Larry Csonka, Jim Kiick and Mercury Morris last year. He also returned nine kickoffs for 251 yards.

Tillman Leads Solo Sailing

BARRINGTON, R.I. (AP) — Dick Tillman of Orlando, Fla., took the lead Thursday in the opening races of the North American inter-class solo sailing championships. Tillman, a three-time North American laser champion, had a low score of 27¼ points after five races in different class boats on Narragansett Bay.

8 CARDS OF THANKS

Mrs. John McAllister, son Bill, and family wish to thank most sincerely their many friends for lovely cards, letters, flowers and contributions sent in the sad loss of a dear husband and father.
They are not lost our well beloved
Nor have they travelled far

We wish to express our heartfelt gratitude to our many friends, relatives and neighbors for their kindness and beautiful sympathy cards, floral offerings and donations in our recent bereavement in the loss of My Dear Husband, Grant.
—Mrs. Myrtle Field and Family

The family of the late Joe Westad would like to extend heartful thanks to the friends and neighbors for their acts of kindness in the recent loss of beloved son and brother.
—Mother, Sisters and Brothers.

William Cool and family would like to give sincere thanks to all our friends and fellow workers for the floral tribute and cards in sad bereavement of a loving mother and wife.

9 IN MEMORIAM

GREXTON—In cherished and loving memory of our mother, Mrs. Lily Grexton, who passed away Oct. 1st, 1958.
She troubled no one, her wants were few
And now, dear Lord, she has come to you
Take care of her, as she takes her rest
For the one you have taken was the very best.
A cheery smile, a heart of gold
She suffered much, but never told
Till God above knew what was best
—Lovingly remembered always — The Family.

9 IN MEMORIAM

TIPPETT—In memory of George Tippett, loveing Husband, Father and Gragdfather who passed away one year ago today, October 1, 1973. Fondly remembered and sadly missed wife Violet and family.

THEY SHALL GROW NOT OLD, AS WE WHO ARE LEFT GROW OLD. AGE SHALL NOT WEARY THEM, NOR THE YEARS CONDEMN. AT THE GOING DOWN OF THE SUN, AND IN THE MORNING, WE WILL REMEMBER THEM.
—WITH GRATITUDE. SANDS.

Time for Some Clean-Up Work

This week could prove suitable for cleaning up certain parts of the flower beds. Some annual plants were still making good shows at the weekend.

Petunias, African marigolds and scarlet salvia, though semi tropical and slow in a cool summer, become remarkably durable by fall. None of us likes to pull them up before they are spoiled by frost or rain.

But among the herbaceous perennials, which keep more to their season, we can get to work quite profitably.

Michaelmas-daisies, the fall asters of Eastern Canada, flower in one short season of four to six weeks making delightful garden harmonies of red, purple, rose, pink and white.

Now the faded flowers should be cut down to prevent unwanted seedlings which will spoil the original planting.

Allow the green leaves to remain for another month. They will feed new roots while soil remains warm.

Rudbeckia, of which the Gloriosa-daisy is perhaps the best known today, is basically a genus of hardy perennials to give years of use by annual division of the roots. The hybrid Gloriosa-daisy however is not completely hardy in some of our soils and winters.

They survive best in a sandy soil with plentiful humus to maintain growth in our dry summers.

Physostegia with various common names of False-dragonhead, Obedience-plant and even American or Mexican-heather, is hardy and of great value in late fall for its plentiful spikes of rosy pink blooms on three foot stalks. When it fades, cut the flower stems back.

The tall Anemone hupehensis remains in bloom for weeks liking the cool fall weather, so leave the buds to open in succession to liven the border.

Their colors of soft pink, rose and pure white are acceptable as cut flowers in the home if you don't have masses of chrysanthemums for the purpose.

Chrysanthemums are a bit difficult to handle for the winter when you grow a few for their garden value late in the season and perhaps for home decoration.

The roots are hardier to frost than to wet cold soil.

The best you can do is to cut down the stems progressively as the flowers are finished. Then in early spring take three or four shoots three inches long from the base to root as cuttings.

Put them into pots of sandy soil under plastic and keep them at about 70 degs. F. but with good light. When rooted, plant at once outdoors to grow quickly while the weather is still cool. Then during summer, flower buds will be initiated to open in fall.

This is over-simplification, but it will work for border plants of chrysanthemums. The old roots give poor flowers when left for more than one year, and will eventually die out.

Carnations grown from seed this year are in full bloom. The flowers are so lovely with their perfume and promising buds that we are reluctant to touch them.

But removal of most of the small buds from the lower part of the stems, and those each side of the top central bud will enable more to open.

Whether these carnation plants will live until spring will not be known until spring.

By early November all the flower stems should be cut off at their base just above the grey leaves. Nothing more can be done except to protect with dry twiggy branchlets of some other plant in the event of a hard frost.

With these few attentions, the rest will be up to the vagaries of our coastal climate, which is admittedly fair to good.

Liability Pursued For Damage

Vancouver Island mobile home dealers want CP Rail held responsible for damages to mobile homes waiting in the mainland yard for transport here.

"Homes sitting in the holding yard on the Vancouver side are being side-swiped and damaged before they're loaded on to the barge and we think CPR should be liable," said Tom Large, spokesman for the Western Mobile Homes Dealers Association.

The issue was raised at the association's regional meeting today at The Empress.

Large said the issue has been tackled more than once on an individual dealers basis, but "CP Rail say they aren't responsible for damages until the homes are put on the barge."

He said he did not have statistics on the amount of damages, but the association intends to study the matter further and decide on action to be taken.

In other business delegates discussed the possibility of closing up dealer sales lots in the province for one day a week.

"We're not talking about blue laws or anything," said Large, "we just thought it would be nice to give sales persons one day off a week. It might be Sunday or another day."

Large said any decision on closing shop for one day a week would have to be made simultaneously, between the eight sales lots in Greater Victoria.

Traditionally the lots remain open all week to cater to those who can only shop for mobile homes on weekends.

Dirty Duck Offers Suds In Square

A restaurant with the unlikely name of Dirty Duck opened in Eastion Square today.

It also became the first restaurant in British Columbia to offer draught beer to its customers.

Art Smith says the name is a direct "steal" from a pub of that name in the English town of Stratford.

He decided to add draught beer to his wine and liquor list because "somebody had to try it."

The specialty of the house will be roast duck.

Smith is hoping the Dirty Duck will emulate the goose that laid the golden egg.

"We're playing it by ear, we hope it works," he said.

ACCELERATED RENTAL HOUSING PROGRAM
To Provide Moderately-Priced Rental Housing In Urban Centers Experiencing Extremely Low Vacancy Levels

CALL FOR PROPOSALS

Projects should provide housing accommodation for moderate-income families.

Land for any project must be owned or leased by the proponent or be under option to him. The proposed construction must conform to existing zoning regulations.

Loans up to 95 per cent of costs as determined by CMHC at 8 per cent per annum, amortized over 50 years, are available.

Borrowers must be prepared to enter into an operating agreement with Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which will specify the maximum rent chargeable in respect of each unit as well as the maximum tenant income. Calculation of the proposed rentals will provide for a reasonable return on the borrower's equity.

Two copies of loan applications shall be submitted together with two sets of preliminary plans and specifications. Any or all proposals may not necessarily be accepted.

Deposits are not required at the time of submission, but upon acceptance of a proposal a cheque for an amount calculated on $35.00 per housing unit in the project will be payable to Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Sealed proposals in duplicate clearly marked "Proposals for Rental Housing Units" will be received until 2:00 p.m. on October 30, 1974.

Packages containing the complete information on the "Call for Proposals" and on "General Instructions" may be obtained from:

U.S. Senate Votes Chile Arms Cut

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Senate today voted 47-41 to cut off all U.S. military assistance to Chile shortly after President Ford announced he would veto the cut off.

The Senate approved an amendment by Sen. Edward Kennedy (Dem.-Mass.) to halt all military aid to the South American country which Kennedy said was "engaged in a continuing pattern of gross violations of human rights — including the torture of political prisoners."

The United States is currently providing Chile with some $15 million a year in military aid.

Ford announced he would veto the continuing appropriation resolution to which the Chile amendment was attached because of a similar action Monday in which the Senate voted to ban military aid to Turkey.

He said he would veto legislation to cut off all military aid to Turkey on the grounds such a bill "would destroy any hope" for U.S. success in settling the Cyprus dispute.

The Senate Monday passed an amendment cutting off military aid to any country using U.S. weapons in violation of laws governing their use. The amendment, by Sen. Thomas Eagleton, (Dem.-Mo.,) would directly effect Turkey who used U.S. arms in the Cyprus conflict.

"It is my conviction that approval of the continuing resolution, containing the Eagleton amendment or similar language, would destroy any hope for the success of the initiatives the United States has already taken or may take in the future to contribute to a just settlement of the Cyprus dispute," Ford said in a statement.

Ford said, "It is my intention, therefore, to withold my consent to any continuing resolution which reaches my desk containing language such as that found in the Eagleton amendment."

Ford coupled the veto threat with an offer of compromise if the Senate would go along with softer language.

Ford said in a White House statement that his position was shared by Secretary of State Henry Kissinger, who was in New York to make what the president described as "a major effort in talks with Greek and Turkish representatives to bring about progress."

The Senate voted 51-32 today in favor of an amendment to regularly reduce foreign aid and military assistance expenditures by 30 per cent in November and 10 per cent monthly thereafter until Congress approves a new appropriations bill to govern such spending.

The United States currently spends an average of $233 million a month on such aid.

The White House, however, warded off another defeat for Ford as the Senate killed, 46-to-33, a move by Frank Church (Dem.—Idaho) to cut off all economic and military aid and credit for members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries that have jacked up the price of oil sold to the United States.

Robbers Foiled At Gas Station

A service station employee cut short an attemped robbery Sunday night when he wrested a handful of bills from a thief's grasp.

Peter Kappel spotted the thief behind the cash register after a robbery accomplice had set fire to a nearby garbage container to distract Kappel from the office.

The thieves were described by the lone employee as between 13 and 16 years of age, and police are still searching for the pair.

After racing into the office and grabbing the money Kappel phoned the operator for the police.

According to station proprietor Wayne Wrigley, the operator took so long to answer, the youths were long gone by the time police and firemen were reached.

That was the second time in a month youngsters have tried to rob the Mohawk station at 3005 Douglas.

The first attempt involved four youths aged 9-13 years, said Wrigley, who were eventually caught after making off with $125 from the service station till.

Long-Range Forecast: Gloom and Catastrophe

CHICAGO — A University of Chicago geologist Monday issued a gloomy forecast for the next 100 years, predicting at least one major earthquake in a western city, widespread drought and famine, intolerable pollution, and an exhaustion of natural resources.

However, Peter J. Wylie, a professor of petrology and geochemistry at the university, said the good news is that all this will not lead to Doomsday. New discoveries or inventions could nullify his gloomy forecast, he added.

SACRAMENTO, Calif. — A woman has filed suit charging a defectively designed brassiere dislodged her surgical breast implants.

Shirley Lewis complained that the "sculptress bra" had not lived up to its advertisement of being "warranted" as safe.

She claimed the implants, soft plastic forms filled with silicone, were dislodged after wearing the bra about a month.

She is demanding $200,000 from the bra's manufacturer, Con-Stan Industries of Los Angeles.

ANKARA — Former Turkish premier Suleyman Demirel has been asked to form a new government. Demirel, premier from 1965 until the military forced him out in 1971, said he will meet with leaders of his Justice party before trying to fashion a workable coalition.

MADRID — Church services and a government reception today marked the 38th anniversary of Francisco Franco's inauguration as chief of state. Next to Emperor Hirohito of Japan, he is the world's head of state with the most years in office.

BARNSLEY, England — Motorists following a truck near this northern city were astounded to see a man sitting in the rear and throwing 10 pound notes onto the road.

They slammed on their brakes and began scrambling around the highway collecting the notes, which totalled more than $2,750.

The honest motorists handed the cash into the local police, who are anxious to trace the mystery benefactor.

A spokesman said: "If the money isn't claimed in two months it will become the property of the people who found it."

WASHINGTON — Sen. James O. Eastland, warns that unrestricted use of marijuana could create a "marijuana culture" and society might find itself "saddled with a large population of semi-zombies." In a report Eastland wrote for the senate internal security subcommittee hearings on marijuana. He blamed the media and educators for development of a said he opposed any effort to "marijuana culture," and decriminalize the drug.

Welfare Big Business

CHICAGO (UPI) — For Linda Taylor, welfare cheques are a way of life. They help her pay bills on her 1974 Cadillac, Lincoln and Chevy station wagon, the four buildings she claims to own on the south side, and anything else her lifestyle has helped her to own.

Two detectives, Jack Sherwin and Jerry Kush, stumbled onto Miss Taylor and her extraordinary network of names, addresses, phone numbers and husbands when she came into the station Aug. 8 to report a $14,000 apartment theft police believe never happened.

Fingerprints revealed that Miss Taylor, 47, had tried a similar theft report in 1972 and that she was wanted in Michigan for welfare fraud.

Kush said during their month-long investigation, they discovered Miss Taylor receives welfare cheques and food stamps at two different addresses and under two different names; that she has at least 27 aliases; uses 31 addresses; has 25 different phone numbers; has three social security cards, and owns stocks and bonds under a variety of names.

She claims to have had several husbands — all now dead, and was married last month to a sailor who is 26 years her junior.

White Not All Bad

BURNABY (CP) — The president of the Saskatchewan Metis Society disagreed Monday with some Indian militants who want a separate nation.

"I like to drive a car; I like to watch television," he told a Simon Fraser University audience.

"These things come from a white society and we must become involved in the democratic process with our own town councils, our own school board and our own MLAs," he said.

He also said Indian leaders could not totally disapprove of recent armed confrontations between Indian militants and police at Cache Creek and Kenora.

"Indian leaders become too moderate, so their people take things into their own hands," he said.

Sinclair said Indian political integration with white society could be a slow process of which violence might be a part.

"With so many Indian people in jail many of them are saying they might as well go to jail for a political crime rather than drunk driving or car theft charges."

Opposition Shrugs Off Throne Speech

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition leaders greeted Monday's throne speech with about the same enthusiasm they would reserve for a warmed-over version of yesterday's dinner.

"There was really nothing surprising in the speech," Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told reporters. "I don't see anything that hasn't been mentioned before." (For details of the speech see Page 10.)

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said the speech does not offer adequate approaches to the problem.

Despite the government's explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy, Broadbent said he saw signs in the speech that the government might do just that. He warned that such a policy would be "a very bad one" that would arouse the NDP's strongest opposition.

Social Credit leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed like "an exact copy" of the first one.

Spokesmen for business and labor in British Columbia, however, had praise for a few sections of the speech.

But they said the government's proposals for combatting inflation were vague and difficult to assess.

A statement from the Employers' Council of B.C. said the jury will still be out on the government's plans until the budget is brought down.

B.C. Federation of Labor president George Johnston agreed with this assessment, adding that he is not convinced the government plans to curb profiteering. He questioned the value of the "inflation conferences" the speech proposed.

Johnston said he hopes the budget will eliminate the 11 per cent building materials tax and provide relief from high housing costs.

"They want to increase productivity," he said. "I'm sure the 10,000 people laid off in the woods industry in B.C. would be happy to be back on the job."

DOW DIPS BELOW 600

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average, an indicaor of blue chip issue movement, fell about 11 points today, dipping below the 600 level to 593 for the first time since 1962.

The market recovered later, however, and was down only 6.73 at 601.14 by 2 p.m.

Barrett Rules Out Property Tax Leap

He said he will consider any recommendations from the legislature's taxation committee which may urge the government to "back off" on its plans to set up a new assessment system.

Provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright told the committee last week that chaos could erupt in B.C.'s property taxes next year if measures aren't taken this fall to ease the inequities caused by the government's move to have all property assessed at 100 per cent of its market value.

Premier Barrett said on a radio show the government is waiting for the report of the committee before it acts on the assessment issue and committee chairman Carl Liden (NDP-Delta) said the all-party group may recommend stop-gap measures to avoid problems next year.

The government introduced legislation last spring which would have all property assessed at 100 per cent of value. It then established the taxation committee to investigate the whole question of taxation with a view to insuring the new assessment system does not lead to inequitable tax payments.

Cabinet has granted B.C. municipalities $6.9 million to cover operating costs of the new provincial assessment authority this year.

The grant includes $5.7 million to pay the salaries of assessors and clerical staff until July 1 when the new authority took over all assessments in B.C.

Municipalities have continued to pay and house all local assessment officials but cabinet has now granted the money to reimburse the local authorities for all the costs.

The grant will pay for salaries, office expenses and facilities and other accommodation from July 1 to March 31, 1975.

More Rain On Way For City

The first rain since Sept. 8 fell on Victoria this morning; tonight and Wednesday could bring more of the same.

A total of .12 inches of rain fell at Victoria International Airport overnight, not exactly a deluge but still equal to the total rainfall for September.

Overcast skies and periods of rain are expected today and Wednesday, with temperatures near 60 in the daytime and overnight lows near 50.

September was not only the second driest on record, but also had 62 more hours of sunshine than the normal 196.9 hours for the month.

Mean temperature for September was 60.4 degrees, 3.3 higher than normal.

In northern B.C., late summer weather disappeared during the weekend into snowfalls of four to six inches and temperatures between 10 and 20 degrees.

In the Fort St. John region, a new low temperature was set Sunday of 12 degrees, 11 degrees below the previous record.

Snowfall there broke the previous record for total September snowfall — 17.4 inches, compared with 12 inches recorded in 1972.

Sunday temperatures at Cranbrook dropped to 28, Revelstoke to 31 and Blue River to 27, all near-record lows.

Indians Seize 'Embassy'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Militant Indians forced off Parliament Hill by riot equipped police and soldiers with fixed bayonets Monday moved into a century-old federal building today and declared it their embassy.

Three RCMP officers were slightly hurt when they clashed with 300 indians during the demonstration on the first day of Parliament. It was not known how many protestors were injured in the demonstration — one of the most violent ever witnessed on Parliament Hill.

Eighteen persons were arrested, but four were later released. Seven have been charged with obstructing police and assaulting police, four were charged with obstruction and three with assault.

Indian spokesman Louie Cameron told reporters Monday night that their list of demands would be increased. He refused to say whether they planned another march on Parliament or any other action.

"For now, we claim this building, wrecked as it is, as the embassy of the native people," Cameron said. The three-storey, 100-year-old building is an empty warehouse which was to be restored by the federal government.

"We have always recognized ourselves as an independent nation in this formal democracy. We have established ourselves as an independent government," Cameron said.

He said the Indians do not plan to try to arrange a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"Trudeau has gone all over the place, so he can come on over here," he said, referring to Trudeau's trips abroad.

Trudeau today criticized the Indian protest, saying it may have done their cause more harm than good. His government would never negotiate under the threat of violence.

However, he added, the government still is prepared to meet leaders of the group to discuss grievances.

Ken Dennis, of British Columbia, one of the leaders of the group of about 200 Indians, said the demonstration would have ended peacefully if the prime minister or other officials had come out to hear the protest.

"It was a pretty gutless thing for Trudeau to do. It would never have become violent if he had come out, and he knows it."

Meanwhile, Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan was expected to announce that he would soon visit a number of reserves to see firsthand the conditions which led to the protest.

Sources said he will visit the Caughnawaga reserve south of Montreal and a number of reserves in the West.

The minister is also expected to tell the Commons that

Demonstrators Burn Cars

MONTREAL (CP) — About 45 officers were needed to quell a violent three-hour demonstration today at a strike-bound United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in nearby Longueuil.

A spokesman for Longueuil police said officers from the municipal force and from Quebec Provincial Police were brought in after six cars were overturned and four of them burned during a demonstration by 300 to 400 persons.

The police spokesman said four or five persons were treated for slight injuries suffered during the demonstration but no arrests were made.

The demonstration followed a report made public Monday night which said there can be no mediated or negotiated settlement to the nine-month-old labor dispute between the company and 2,500 production workers at three United Aircraft plants on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River across from Montreal.

The report, prepared for Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer by mediator Pierre Dufresne, said the position of the two sides was "irreconcilable."

The dispute, which began last Jan. 7 when production workers walked off the job to back contract demands, has been marked by incidents of violence.

Several explosive devices have been set off near the plant, slightly damaging property, and several non-union employees who stayed on the job at United Aircraft have been beaten.

Bicycle Injuries Soar 308 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) released a national survey Monday indicating a 308 per cent jump in bicycle injuries and deaths since 1970 and called on provincial governments to enact laws on bicycle equipment and operation.

The CAA said bicycle deaths rose to 28 in 1973 from 10 in 1970 and injuries increased to 2,174 from 704, and urged provincial governments to license bicycle riders and enact safety legislation.

It also urged municipal governments to co-operate in building bicycle paths to separate bicycles from motor vehicles.

Bicycle sales were 1.1 million in 1973 and are expected to reach 1.5 million this year, the association said. Before the bicycle boom began in 1971, annual sales were about 400,000.

But the association says bicycle manufacturers forecast sales will level off at about one million annually after this year.

The survey of 124 cities with populations ranging between 5,000 and 600,000 indicated that large cities are the safest cycling areas.

In cities with populations ranging between 25,000 and 100,000, the death-injury rate was five bicycle riders for every 10,000 people, considerably higher than the rate of 3.9 for cities between 100,000 and 200,000 people and 2.3 for communities over 200,000.

The CAA also discovered that:

Riders aged between five and 19 made up about 83 per cent of those killed and injured in 1973;

more than 95 per cent of all bicycle deaths and injuries were from collisions with motor vechicles;

NEWS BRIEFS

Bomb Suspect Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — FBI investigators in Portland, Ore., are holding a suspect in last week's mail bombing in Winnipeg which blew off the hand of a court official.

An FBI spokesman said in a telephone interview from Portland that a 50-year-old man was turned over to U.S. immigration authorities after he was picked up Sunday.

African Miners Shot

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African Press Association reports police opened fire on 500 battling African mine workers, killing two and injuring four.

The report says seven policemen were injured in the clash Sunday at a platinum mine at Marikana.

Police Kill Three

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police in the industrial city of Cordoba killed three guerrillas, including a woman, today after the group opened fire on a patrol car, spokesmen said. Two policemen were wounded.

The incident in Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, was the first reported guerrilla action since a broad anti-subversion law went into effect today.

China Marks 25th

PEKING (Reuter) — China celebrated its 25th anniversary as a Communist state today, marked by a triumphant return to public life by Premier Chou En-lai.

Chou, fighting a bout of illness, made his first public appearance in two months when he spoke before more than 4,000 banquet guests in Peking's Great Hall of the People Monday night.

Guerillas Toughen

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas holding a U.S. woman diplomat and six other hostages in the Venezuelan consulate since last Friday suddenly hardened their position today in the slow-moving negotiations with U.S. and Dominican government authorities.

BLOCK BROS. EARNINGS UP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Net earnings of Block Bros. Industries Ltd. rose 37 per cent in the six months ended July 31 to $2,105,296 or 33 cents a share compared with $1,528,142 or 23 cents a share a year ago.

Chairman Arthur Block said in the report that volume of real estate sales fell sharply in the May-July period because of higher mortgage interest rates, credit tightening and higher unemployment.

Ford Will Testify On Pardon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a gesture not made by an American president for more than 100 years, President Ford has volunteered to testify before congressmen and answer questions about his pardon of Richard Nixon.

"This is to advise you that I expect to appear personally to respond to the questions raised . . ." Ford said in a three-sentence letter delivered to Rep. William L. Hungate (Dem.—Mo.), chairman of a house judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice. He offered to appear within 10 days.

It was more than the surprised congressmen had expected or asked.

Most recent presidents have asserted "executive privilege" to avoid giving information to congress — much less appear in person.

Nixon fought for that principle all through the Watergate scandal, saying he had to preserve the powers of the presidency.

The committee has before it two "resolutions of inquiry" asking Ford questions about the Nixon pardon granted three weeks ago. It was generally assumed that these would be written answers.

TIMES NAMES NEW EDITOR

Stuart Underhill, publisher of the Victoria Times, announced today the appointment of George Oake as editor of the Times.

Born in Edmonton, Oake has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alberta and a journalism degree from Carleton University, Ottawa.

His seven years in newspapers began with general reporting for the Ottawa Journal and later, editorial writing there.

After freelance writing in Europe, Oake joined the Victoria Times in 1969 as an editorial writer and later served as city editor and features writer before returning to editorial writing.

Asked what he sees as the function of the editorial page, he said:

"I think it's to interpret and offer opinions on the community, the province and the world at a time when they are changing faster than at any other period in the history of mankind.

"An editor and an editorial page shouldn't necessarily accept the conventional wisdom. In a sense we're the leading edge in interpreting change to people and sometimes we should play the devil's advocate to encourage debate."

Prince George Has Top Pay

OTTAWA (CP) — Prince George had the highest average income in B.C. in 1972, according to tax returns for that year.

With a reported average income of $8,583, it ranked tenth among Canadian cities, Revenue Minister Ron Basford reported Monday. Victoria was 40th, with $7,869.

Among 100 selected cities, Alberni ranked 16th, with an average income of $8,335, Dawson Creek, 57th ($7,460), Kamloops, 13th ($8,502), Kelowna, 51st ($7,555), Nanaimo, 25th, ($8,111), New Westminster, 27th ($8,051), Penticton, 49th ($7,573), Prince Rupert, 31st ($7,946), Trail-Rossland, 21st ($8,159), Vancouver, 18th ($8,285) and Vernon, 30th ($7,968).

The community in Canada with the highest income was Oakville, Ont. ($9,945). Sydney-Glace Bay, N.S. was at the bottom of the list with an average income of $6,462.

The occupational group reporting the highest average income was that of self-employed doctors ($41,195). They were followed by self-employed lawyers ($30,603), self-employed dentists ($28,363), self-employed engineers and architects ($25,477) and self-employed accountants ($20,247).

Investors in Canada reported an average income of $9,178, property owners an average income of $8,925, farmers an average income of $6,954, and fishermen an average income of $6,482.

No Star Witness As Trial Begins

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Watergate cover-up trial of five associates of former president Richard M. Nixon began with jury selection today and the prospect that Nixon, the star witness, might never appear to answer questions about the scandal.

Nixon, an unindicted co-conspirator who received a pardon from President Ford although he has admitted no guilt, was subponeaed by both the prosecution and the defence. Beddridden with phlebitis in California, Nixon was said by his doctors to be too ill to appear or even give a deposition for at least a month — possibly three.

U.S. district Judge John J. Sirica opened the trial in the huge, ceremonial courtroom on the sixth floor of the same federal courthouse where he tried the original Watergate burglars nearly two years ago.

About 200 of the 1,000 prospective jurors were seated in the courtroom as Sirica launched into a seies of questions that eventually would weed them down to a panel of 12 to decide the fate of five of the seven men indicted last March for plotting to hush up the Watergate scandal — John D. Ehrlichman, former attorney general John N. Mitchell, former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman, former assistant attorney general Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson, an attorney for the re-election committee.

All of the defendants have pleaded innocent.

TODAY'S GRAIN

WINNIPEG (CP) — Prices were generally lower today in moderate activity on the Winnipeg Commodity Exchange.

Monday's volume of trade was 1,089,000 bushels of feed wheat, 1,817,000 of oats, 2,556,000 of barley, 40,000 of corn, 1,467,000 of rye, 842,000 of flax, and 1,532,000 of rapeseed.

CHICAGO (AP) — Profit-taking moved in on some farm commodity futures Tuesday after most pits had set limit gains for one session and, in the liquidation that followed, some limit declines were posted on the Board of Trade.

Soybean futures were up the limit of 30 cents a bushel across the board early, but the last two options closed 30 cents under the previous close. Soybean oil was up 100 points through most of the session, but some distant options were down the limit of 100 points at the close. Soybean meal was up about $7 a ton early and closed with distant options down the limit of $10 a ton.

Corn futures were up the limit of 10 cents and all six closed at the limit lower. Oats closed the limit of six cents lower after an early six cents gain. Wheat futures lost about 18 cents a bushel.

The early demand for most commodities was influenced again by frost and freezing temperatures overnight in portions of the Midwest. Prices then came off the highs and trade followed in all pits. Heavy selling then was set off in the major pits.

At the close, soybeans were 13 to 30 cents a bushel lower, Nov. 8.77; Chicago wheat 16 to 18½ lower, Dec. 4.78; Gulf hard red wheat not traded; corn down 10 cents, Dec. 3.77½ and oats down 6 cents, Dec. 1.88.

James Bay 'People' Warned by School Trustee

Professionals seem to be "taking over" James Bay's community movement, Greater Victoria school board trustee Walter Donald told community leaders Monday.

"Every time I come to talk about James Bay I meet mostly professional social workers and I must tell you I am suspicious," Donald said at a meeting of the board and James Bay leaders.

"It seems to me that now the professionals are taking over and it's hurting you," he said.

The James Bay spokesmen, who had come to discuss their plans to integrate health, education, recreation and social services in the area, denied this was happening.

"I don't think the people in the community are ever going to let the professionals take over," said Lorne De Girolamo, a community development worker hired by the James Bay Community Association with government funds, and a James Bay resident.

He said professionals became involved in James Bay community activity very early, but the real impetus for action came from the citizens themselves.

De Girolamo praised agencies like James Bay community school and the human resources department saying they "have just opened their doors to us."

DONALD
". . . I am suspicious"

"That place is like walking into someone's home," he said of the human resources department.

The community association's plans for integrated services, which are estimated will cost $1.6 million in capital expenditure, include such things as expanding the school library so the whole community can use it.

Any request for money to expand James Bay school facilities or increase staff to aid the community project must be made by the school board, so the commmunity leaders hope to involve the board in their planning.

They invited the board to join them in forming a joint planning committee, a invitation the trustees did not pick up on.

Trustees pointed out they have 59 schools to be concerned about, not just James Bay community school.

And James Bay school has already received "preferred treatment" by being given extra staff to help organize the community education program, superintendent of schools Jake Longmore said.

The James Bay integration project is one of four such pilot projects being developed in B.C. All integration projects are under the guidance of a group of experts called the Development Group, who act on behalf of the provincial government.

James Bay is the only pilot project that hopes to integrate education as well as health and social services.

Development Area Studied By Esquimalt

By KIT COLLINS
Times Staff

Major development may be in store for 25 acres of privately-owned land on the northwest boundary of Esquimalt, Ald. Terry Prentice said today.

Prentice said Esquimalt council is considering declaring the land between Admirals Road and the railroad tracks a development area and "indications are that it would allow higher density developments."

Current regulations retrict density to duplex and Prentice expects favorable reaction from the property owners involved.

A public information meeting, chaired by Prentice, is slated for Oct. 9, at 7:30 p.m., at the municipal hall.

Prentice said an application by Pine Home Builders Ltd. to have two parcels of land there declared a development area allowing a 50-unit townhouse sparked the move.

Developer Chris Pike has promised that current duplex density will be maintained if the development is allowed on the five-acre parcel.

But Prentice said that "rather than rezone each property piece by piece or rezone the whole area we're lokking at declaring the entire site a development area so someone can come up with a proposal and between the two of us — council and the residents — we can decide on it."

Prentice said council was approached by area residents about four years ago.

"They were being pressured to sell their land then by developers. Council's attitude at that time was: it's your property . . . come up with a proposal and we'll look t it."

"This way council can assess proposed development in terms of the long term development of the municipality."

Condominium Site Approved

Saanich council Monday night approved a land-use contract which will permit Penthouse Development, Ltd., to build 18 single-storey retirement condominiums on Cedar Hill between McKenzie and Arrow.

Architect Gerald Sager said the units would sell between $35,000 and $40,000.

"Terms of the contract are very rigid," Mayor Ed Lum assured Turner. "No changes will be allowed."

Lum said land-use contracts were the best control municipalities had over new developments.

Applications for duplexes at 3396 Salisbury Way, the corner of Primrose and Gladiola and 4111 Marigold were approved.

In spite of Ald. Sandy Noel's contention that "something more imaginative in the design" was needed for five townhouses proposed for 1006 Falmouth, council approved W. A. Frebold's bid to build the units on the three-lot site.

HO-HUM ATTITUDE HAUNTS HEARINGS

Provincial government hearings on pre-paid contracts will begin in Victoria on Thursday, but there may be little response to the call for submissions from the public.

Similar hearings in New Westminster last week attracted only three people and no briefs were presented to the three-member committee set up by the provincial consumer affairs department to investigate the problems of pre-paid contracts.

A member of the Victoria branch of the Consumer Association of Canada said Monday as far as she knew her organization was not planning to attend.

William Kinsey, chairman of the committee, said last week he was surprised at the lack of response in light of extensive advertising.

The committee will be at the Carlton Club in Esquimalt from 1 to 4 p.m. and 7 to 10 p.m. Thursday and at the Red Lion Inn, from 10 a.m. to noon and 1 to 4 p.m. Friday.

Sidney Urged to Back Regional Water Plan

The best way for Sidney to shore up its overtaxed water supply is to pass the regional plan and then let the whole region be responsible for water services, Capital Region Board chairman Jim Campbell said Monday.

Campbell said if the regional plan passed, the board could change its letters patent to allow it to supply water; a function it cannot legally do now.

Campbell's suggestion met with opposition, skepticism and outright anger from members of Sidney council and some citizens at a public meeting Monday called to find out what Sidney thinks of the plan.

But residents with definite views on the plan were in the minority. Most of the crowd of about 50 came to listen, not talk.

Mayor Stan Dear said only two people had taken up Sidney council's invitation to go to municipal hall and have a look at the regional plan and some citizens at the meeting were unsure exactly what the regional board was.

Campbell took a few minutes to explain, saying the board was not a provincial government department and that its members were elected, not appointed.

Dear said the regional board was imposing the plan on Sidney, and then leaving it up to the municipality to implement it.

"It's like the regional board telling me to buy a Datsun and then leaving it up to me how to drive it. What if I don't want a Datsun in the first place?"

Council's main oppostiion to the plan is that it limits population to 9,500 by the year 2,001. Council contends it needs a greater population to be able to bring in the badly-needed water line from the Greater Victoria system. Development in Sidney has been frozen for almost year, pending increased water supply.

Campbell said the solution to the water problem is to establish a regional plan which sets the growth for the area and then shift the responsibility to the region as a whole to supply the services.

"After you make the decision on where the region will grow, then you make sure that the people here now and the people who are going to stay here, get water," Campbell said.

Campbell was accused of selling Sidney a "bill of goods" on the regional plan of pushing the plan through by himself.

"It's flattering you think I have that kind of power," he said," but I just live on a farm and come over here two days a week.

"I'm not a very successful dictator," he joked.

Mayor Dear said Sidney has established its own community plan three years ago with a forecast population of about 12,000.

"What we want is the regional plan to accept Sidney's own plan," Dear said.

Campbell said council should make its feelings known by way of amendments to the regional plan.

AUTO RAMS MAIL BOXES

Two 20-year-olds will appear in Sidney provincial court Monday charged with mischief following the destruction of between 10 and 15 mailboxes and signs on Bower Bank and Courser Drive early this morning.

Sidney RCMP said about $400 damage was done when a car rammed the boxes.

Boys Charged With Entries

Two 15-year-old boys were to appear in Victoria juvenile court today charged with breaking into four homes in the Blenkinsop and MacKenzie area Monday.

Saanich detectives said they were caught breaking into one of the homes when a neighbor saw them and called police.

Boys Found

Two youngsters missing since Sunday while hiking in the Ladysmith-Chemainus area were found at 10:30 a.m. Monday none the worse for their overnight experience in the bush.

An RCMP helicopter found the pair — Brent Sobjerg, 14, and Darrell Watson, 10 — near Silver Lake where they had camped in an abandoned cabin.

Priors Leaving Forest

The Prior family will be moved from its crude forest home as soon as funeral arrangements are made for their two-year-old son Yehudi, Human Resources Minister Norman Levi said today.

But he declined to say where.

Levi said a medical examination of the couple's second child, two-month-old Pollen had found him in "very good health."

Meanmhile, in Duncap, acting coroner Dr. R. R. Wilson said an inquest will be held into the death of the child.

He said viewing of the body will take place in Duncan tonight at which time an autopsy report will be released and a date set for the inquest, probably sometime within in the next two or three weeks.

The youngster's nude body was found at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in a little spring of water under a log 10 feet from Holt Creek and about four miles from his parent's camp, nine miles northwest of Shawnigan Village.

He had been missing since Monday afternoon.

Cowichan search and rescue spokesman Hal Orrick said he believed the child died that night after stumbling into the spring.

He said the child must have wandered over a small ridge and into the next valley down to Holt Creek, perhaps thinking it was Wild Deer Creek where he lived.

"There were footprints on the logging road near where we found him.

"If we had been called in Monday afternoon when he was first missing I might have driven that way and seen him on the road."

Yehudi's parents, William 25, and Ann, 24, reported the child's disappearance to police Monday but declined offers for assistance saying they thought they could find the child themselves.

JORDAN

Const. Jim Harrison of Shawnigan Lake RCMP said officers and tracking dogs will begin today to try to retrace Yehudi's movements from the time he went missing.

The tragedy has sparked an emotion-packed telegram to Levi from Social Credit welfare critic Pat Jordan.

She called for a complete investigation into the matter and cited other cases of child tragedies involving Levi's department in the past month.

"I demand you hold a public inquiry, into these shocking tragedies and all aspects of your administration," she said.

Jordan said the other tragedies she was referring to involved a baby thrown off a B.C. Ferry after a human resources official was notified of the mother's unstable condition, and the case of a child beaten to death in Vancouver after reports of abuse had been made to social workers.

For the next few days the Prior family will continue to live in their retreat carved out of the rugged wilderness last winter.

Winner Stands Grounds

He's the best and the most modest.

Saanich was well represented by officials when the municipality received the Park and Tilford Trophy at the Bayshore Inn in Vancouver.

The award, for which more than 60 entries were submitted from all across the province, was for the beautification of the four acres on which the municipal hall stands.

In addition to the all-season gardens, the grounds contain a putting green, pools and streams.

He flatly refused to go over and accept the award.

Janitors' Meet Set for Sunday

Janitors employed by the Greater Victoria school board will meet this Sunday night to decide what action to take in the long-simmering dispute over "rating" of schools to equalize workloads.

Bob Cunningham, first vice-president of Local 382 of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said because of the attitude of the men . . . "it is no longer available to us to delay any longer. We'll let the members decide."

He said the janitors will decide at the meeting, at 7:30 p.m. Sunday in the Union Centre, whether to start a study session, walkout, "or whatever."

Ask The Times

Q: While I was strolling along the beach I came upon what looks like a Chinese cemetery. It looks like a huge waste of good land, as is Ross Bay cemetery. Why did our forebears pick such places for these cemeteries, putting them so close to the sea instead of situating them outside of the communities? Will these cemeteries ever be put to better use or will they be there forever? J. E. R.

A: Ross Bay cemetery is still used and it's doubtful there will be any drastic change because, since it was established in 1872 hundreds of British Columbia notables have been buried there, including Emily Carr, Sir James Douglas, Victoria's first mayor Thomas Harris and Sir Matthew Baillie Begbie, "the hanging judge."

The Chinese cemetery at Harling Point was established many years ago by the Chinese Consolidation Benevolent Association and is still owned and operated by the association, although it has not been used as a burial ground for many years. Association spokesman Peter Wong says at one time there was a bid to make the cemetery into a memorial park and there is still a possibility this could be done.

Both cemeteries were established when Victoria was a much smaller city and, in those years, would have been far from the centre of the town.

Shelter Lacks 'Approval' Proof

A search of diocesan records failed to turn up evidence of approval for Mother Cecilia's animal shelter as a religious undertaking B.C. Supreme Court was told Monday.

Msgr. Michael T. O'Connell, former chancellor of Victoria diocese of the Roman Catholic Church, was giving evidence for the defence in the fourth week of a trial brought against the Society of the Love of Jesus by Mother Cecilia and four other sisters for control of the society.

O'Connell said he searched the files of Bishop William Hill, then head of the diocese, for the approval of Mother Cecilia's animal work, which she alleged Hill gave before his death. But none was found, the priest said.

The church has argued Good Shepherd Shelter has operated without sanction since it was founded in 1962 following Mother Cecilia's departure from St. Mary's Priory at Colwood, which is still the chief work of the society.

Much of the evidence entered by both sides in the case is documentary, going back 40 years, and to date 340 exhibits have been entered. The plaintiffs are trying to prove they are still bona fide members of the society, while the defence maintains they forfeited their standing by such acts and omissions as ignoring the rule of their society and their vows of obedience.

O'CONNELL
. . . made search

O'Connell said when Bishop Remi de Roo returned from the Vatican council in 1965 he began implementing a decree concerning the concept of obedience. There was to be more regard for the good of the outside community relating to the work of the religious community, achieved through dialogue and not dictatorially as before, O'Connell said.

People in religious communities were to take a more active part in the life of the church ecumenically, to become involved with social gestures and to combine with other communities if there was need for new life, "new blood," as he put it.

One of the results locally was by opening Queenswood and Colwood religious communities to outside activities as the sisters offered their buildings for use by workshops and conferences, court was told.

Meanwhile, a sister from another Benedictine community in Yankton, South Dakota, was brought in as prioress of the Colwood group — Leonette Hoesing—who began testifying Monday afternoon.

It was expected the trial would continue through this week, with night sittings scheduled for Thursday and Friday. Mr. Justice H. C. McKay said he has other commitments Oct. 15 and he hoped counsel would take this into consideration.

Domestic Oil Cut Forecast

TORONTO (CP) — Canada would automatically cut domestic oil use in the event of a significant world oil shortage in accordance with a draft international agreement on energy sharing signed last month, according to the Globe and Mail.

The newspaper quotes Ottawa sources as saying that because Canada is a net exporter of oil and has large amounts of oil in reserve and in storage, Canadians are not expected to face actual cuts as large as those in other countries participating in the agreement.

Government experts have suggested that Canada might offset all or any compulsory cutback by tapping surplus domestic oil production in the West and by dipping into storage tanks in the East, it adds.

The agreement, reached last month in Brussels and scheduled to be signed by participating countries late this year, calls for a compulsory seven per cent reduction in the domestic use by the countries once supplies to major Western oil-consuming countries fall to 93 per cent of their needs.

Conciliation Stressed

WASHINGTON (CP) — U.S. Treasury Secretary William Simon adopted a conciliatory stance toward oil-producing countries today and urged international co-operation on energy supplies.

At a news conference, he said domestic measures are the key to the U.S. solution.

"Our leverage on this is the amount of resources in the United States."

He said the U.S. has a dual approach. Conservation was one side and among options being studied were mandatory controls. Use of controls is a decision for President Ford, who is scheduled to announce some economic decisions next week, he said.

Construction Gets Their Goat

ROSEBURG, Ore. (AP) — For years, residents of this southern Oregon lumber town have used Mount Nebo's goats to forecast the weather. Now the goats have gone into hiding. Each morning, residents would look across town to the 1,200-foot mountain.

If the goat herd was near the top, the weather would be fair. If the goats were scattered around the mountain, it would be cloudy, and if they dropped lower on the hill, rain was probable.

Tom Worden, manager of radio station KSRB, runs a special "goat weather forecast," and says the animals were 90 per cent accurate, and says the National Weather Service hit it only about 65 per cent of the time.

But this summer, noisy equipment being used for construction on a nearby highway has sent the goats into hiding. Worden says he is considering filing an environmental-impact protest against the state to stop the work so the goats will return.

Heath Pledges to Get Tough With Rebel British Unions

LONDON — After a low-key start, Britain's general election campaign has come to life with the three main party leaders wrangling about the extent of the country's economic troubles and how to deal with them.

The most noticeable change has been in Conservative leader Edward Heath.

In the first week of the campaign for the Oct. 10 election he largely forsook the usual electioneering rhetoric and held a series of discussion groups usually attended by Conservative party supporters.

At his daily news conference Monday he went on the offensive and hinted that he might get tough with Britain's trade unions if he wins the election.

Heath said the government must stand by the law or cease to be a democratic government.

To uphold the law successfully the country had to be behind its government.

Liberal leader Jeremy Thorpe accused the government of hiding facts about inflation and not making people aware of the gravity of the situation.

But Prime Minister Wilson said the opposition is falsifying the economic position and creating more industrial disruption by their "alarmist" remarks.

His minority Labor government has made a significant improvement since it was elected in February, he says.

Police in Belfast, meanwhile, said they feared a growing wave of vengeance killings in the days leading up to Britain's general election following the murders of two Roman Catholics and one Protestant in 48 hours.

The shooting death of a 37-year-old Protestant in Belfast late Monday night prompted a senior police officer to say, "The latest killing inevitably raises fear that a new pattern of reprisals may be starting to emerge."

Poor Press IMF For New Council

WASHINGTON (CP) — Under pressure from poor countries the International Monetary Fund IMF and World Bank will move this week to set up a new development organization.

Beyond a broad agreement on structure there still is vigorous debate over what the council will be equipped to do.

One issue is appointment of a chief executive officer — an executive secretary — and among names rumored about are those of two Canadians.

Another issue is whether the executive secretary should be appointed now or after the development council has had one or two meetings.

Development council is the shorthand term for the 23-word title in the resolution to establish the committee.

The long form is Joint Ministerial Committee of The Boards of Governors of The Bank and The Fund on The Transfer of Real Resources to Developing Countries.

Resources have been defined only in general terms.

One delegate's comment on the term was: "That's a juicy phrase. Nobody knows what it will cover."

The resolution, setting up the council, says it shall advise the IMF and World Bank "on all aspects of the broad question of the transfer of real resources to the developing countries, and shall make suggestions for consideration by those concerned regarding the implementation of its conclusions."

The poor countries are expected to approve the resolution with little or no debae. Most of the diplomatic infighting occurred when the Committee of 20 — a ministerial council dominated by the rich — drafted the resolution.

The Group of 24 — a committee of less developed countries — expressed its reservations in a communique issued after a meeting last weekend.

The communique said that while they had agreed to the text of the resolution, "this text did not fulfill the expectations of the developing countries either with regard to the mandate of the committee or its procedures."

The Group of 24 gave what it thought should be the priorities:

—Dealing with problems of those countries hardest hit by current economic difficulties.

—Providing access to capital markets and promoting the flow of capital resources — money for investment — to the poor countries.

—Promoting expansion of the real value of export earnings of the developing countries.

Representatives of developing countries have been critical of the IMF and World Bank for being clubs of rich countries.

Voting power of ministerial committees of the IMF has been solidly in favor of the industrial countries.

Sources here say it is still not clear how strongly committed the industrial countries are to making the new development council into an effective force.

An assessment of that political will may be an important factor in whether the Canadian delegation would endorse having a Canadian hired for the job.

Rumored to be on the list of potential candidates are Claude Isbister, executive director of the World Bank for the constituency which includes Canada, and Maurice Strong, chief environmental officer of the United Nations.

Capt. Cook's Charts Still In Use

MONTREAL (CP) — James Dawson, a Lloyd's of London insurance broker, said Monday that most maritime navigational charts are hopelessly out of date for modern deep-draught ships. The world's oceans are "almost totally unsurveyed for the safe passage of today's shipping," Dawson said in a speech at McGill University. Captain James Cook's 18th century charts were "magnificent," Dawson said, but they are still in wide use today.

The Montreal-born Dawson said that when the 72,000-ton ore carrier Igara went aground in the China Sea last year, she was using charts surveyed between 1881 and 1907.

When four United States hydrogen bombs were lost off Palomares, Spain, several years ago, the most up-to-date chart was Spanish, prepared in 1895.

DST End Nearer

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — Congress agreed Monday to put the United States back on standard time for four months beginning Sunday, Oct. 27.

The senate passed the standard-time bill by a voice vote, sending it to President Ford who is expected to sign it into law. The House of Representatives passed the same bill last month.

The bill modifies an experiment in year-round daylight time approved by Congress last December as an energy conservation measure. Daylight time began Jan. 6, 1974, and originally was to run for 22 straight months.

Wheat Figures Don't Add Up

GUELPH, Ont. (CP) — About 400,000 bushels of wheat intended for human consumption may have been sold at a higher price as livestock feed and seed, the annual meeting of the Ontario Wheat Producers Marketing Board was told Monday.

James Robertson, board auditor, said figures for the fiscal year ended June 30 do not add up and an inquiry will be made.

He said the board sold wheat dealers 6.9 million bushels of wheat on the understanding that 6.5 million would be resold to processors at $2.40 a bushel for human consumption.

The other 400,000 bushels were to be sold as feed at $4.40 a bushel and as seed at $3.18 a bushel.

In addition, the board sold 800,000 bushels directly to processors, making a total of 7.3 million bushels intended for human consumption, he said.

But Mr. Robertson said the mills reported processing only 6.9 million bushels not 7.3 million.

Fergus Young, chairman of the board, suggested at the meeting that "maybe wheat producers should strike against the federal government for nonpayment of money which is owing . . . because they sold wheat for the domestic market for less than it could have been sold for export."

Wheat producers were promised a $10-million subsidy in September, 1973, on grain processed for domestic human consumption. But the necessary authorizing legislation has not been passed.

HER WINGS COME NATURALLY

Her grandfather, Heinrich Bahreanburg, 78, flew with the Red Baron in the First World War.

His son, August Fielman, joined the Royal Canadian Air Force as a radio navigator during the Korean conflict. At that time, Evelyn's mother was serving with the German air force as a civilian operator. She later worked for the Royal Air Force in England.

Russia 3 Canada 2

Times News Services

MOSCOW — Russia took the lead today in its hockey series against Team Canada with a 3-2 victory in a rugged, hard-hitting game punctuated by several near fights.

Alexandrew Maltsev scored twice to lead the Soviets over a travel-weary Canadian squad that was delayed in its arrival here Monday.

The victory was the second for Russia in the eight-game series. Canada has one win and two games have been tied. The series finishes in Moscow with games Thursday at 9:30 a.m. and Saturday and Sunday at 8 a.m. (Victoria time).

Game officials, accustomed to the European style of play, appeared unable to keep up with the infractions by both clubs and several obvious penalties were ignored.

Russia's third goal was scored by defenceman Alexandr Gusev midway through the final period. He fired into an empty net after Canadian goaltender Gerry Cheevers was trapped out of position.

Veteran Gordie Howe and his son, Mark, who both play for Houston Aeros of the WHA, got the Canadian goals.

Maltzev scored the only goal of the first period when Canadian defenceman Paul Shmyr gave away the puck in his own zone to Vladimir Vikulov, who passed to Maltsev.

Gordie Howe tied it in the opening minutes of the second period. Mark dug the puck from the corner and steered it to Ralph Backstrom, who passed behind the goal. Howe tipped it past Soviet goalie Vladislav Tretiak from the side of the net.

Maltsev's second goal came on a power play at 15:04 of the second and put Russia ahead to stay. He got it while Johnny McKenzie was serving a hooking penalty.

Gusev's goal came at 11:48 of the third and clinched the outcome despite Mark Howe's scoring effort, his first of the series, with just under two minutes to play. Coach Billy Harris pulled Cheevers for an extra attacker in the closing seconds but Russia held on.

Canada appeared unable to put on any sustained pressure in the Russian end, allowing the Soviets time to set up long passing plays. Outside of a brief flurries by Team Canada, Russia had the game well under control.

DOW DIPS BELOW 600

NEW YORK — The Dow Jones industrial average, an indicaor of blue chip issue movement, fell about 14 points today, dipping below the 600 level to 593 for the first time since 1962.

The market recovered later, however, and was down only 6.73 at 601.14 by 2 p.m.

Barrett Rules Out Property Tax Leap

He said he will consider any recommendations from the legislature's taxation committee which may urge the government to "back off" on its plans to set up a new assessment system.

Provincial assessment commissioner Percy Wright told the committee last week that chaos could erupt in B.C.'s property taxes next year if measures aren't taken this fall to ease the inequities caused by the government's move to have all property assessed at 100 per cent of its market value.

Premier Barrett said on a radio show the government is waiting for the report of the committee before it acts on the assessment issue and committee chairman Carl Liden (NDP-Delta) said the all-party group may recommend stop-gap measures to avoid problems next year.

The government introduced legislation last spring which would have all property assessed at 100 per cent of value. It then established the taxation committee to investigate the whole question of taxation with a view to insuring the new assessment system does not lead to inequitable tax payments.

Cabinet has granted B.C. municipalities $6.9 million to cover operating costs of the new provincial assessment authority this year.

The grant includes $5.7 million to pay the salaries of assessors and clerical staff until July 1 when the new authority took over all assessments in B.C.

Municipalities have continued to pay and house all local assessment officials but cabinet has now granted the money to reimburse the local authorities for all the costs.

The grant will pay for salaries, office expenses and facilities and other accommodation from July 1 to March 31, 1975.

More Rain On Way For City

The first rain since Sept. 8 fell on Victoria this morning; tonight and Wednesday could bring more of the same.

A total of .12 inches of rain fell at Victoria International Airport overnight, not exactly a deluge but still equal to the total rainfall for September.

Overcast skies and periods of rain are expected today and Wednesday, with temperatures near 60 in the daytime and overnight lows near 50.

September was not only the second driest on record, but also had 62 more hours of sunshine than the normal 196.9 hours for the month.

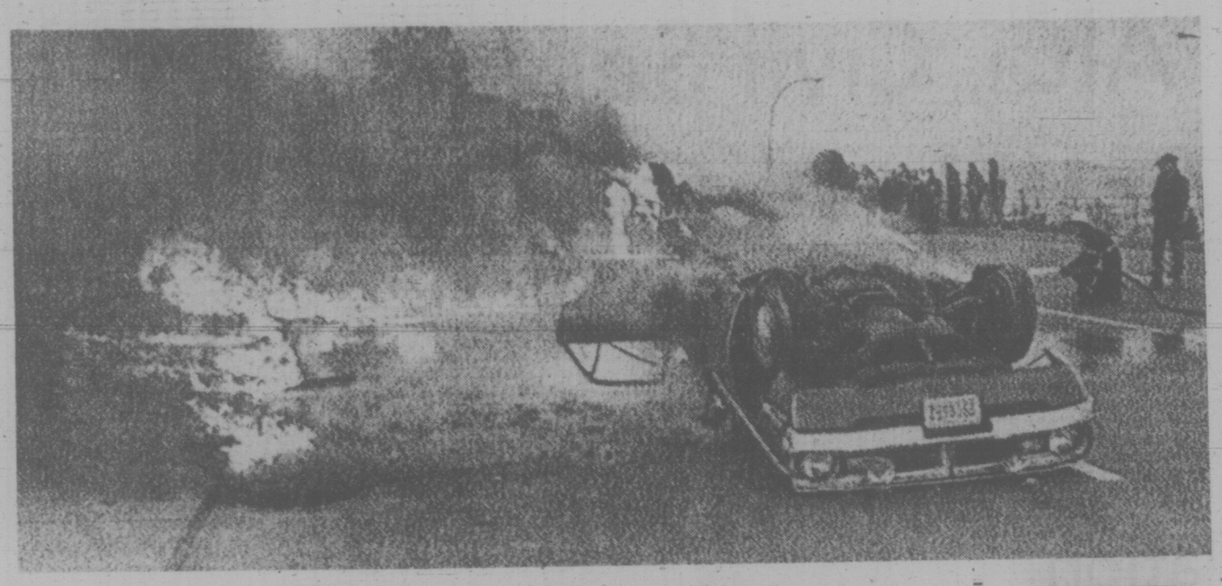
Mean temperature for September was 60.4 degrees, 3.3 higher than normal.

In northern B.C., late summer weather disappeared during the weekend into snowfalls of four to six inches and temperatures between 10 and 20 degrees.

In the Fort St. John region, a new low temperature was set Sunday of 12 degrees, 11 degrees below the previous record.

Snowfall there broke the previous record for total September snowfall — 17.4 inches, compared with 12 inches recorded in 1972.

Sunday temperatures at Cranbrook dropped to 28, Revelstoke to 31 and Blue River to 27, all near-record lows.



Indians Seize 'Embassy'

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Militant Indians forced off Parliament Hill by riot equipped police and soldiers with fixed bayonets Monday moved into a century-old federal building today and declared it their embassy.

Three RCMP officers were slightly hurt when they clashed with 300 indians during the demonstration on the first day of Parliament. It was not known how many protestors were injured in the demonstration — one of the most violent ever witnessed on Parliament Hill.

Eighteen persons were arrested, but four were later released. Seven have been charged with obstructing police and assaulting police, four were charged with obstruction and three with assault.

Indian spokesman Louie Cameron told reporters Monday night that their list of demands would be increased. He refused to say whether they planned another march on Parliament or any other action.

"For now, we claim this building, wrecked as it is, as the embassy of the native people," Cameron said. The three-storey, 100-year-old building is an empty warehouse which was to be restored by the federal government.

"We have always recognized ourselves as an independent nation in this formal democracy. We have established ourselves as an independent government," Cameron said.

He said the Indians do not plan to try to arrange a meeting with Prime Minister Trudeau.

"Trudeau has gone all over the place, so he can come on over here," he said, referring to Trudeau's trips abroad.

Trudeau today criticized the Indian protest, saying it may have done their cause more harm than good. His government would never negotiate under the threat of violence.

However, he added, the government still is prepared to meet leaders of the group to discuss grievances.

Ken Dennis, of British Columbia, one of the leaders of the group of about 200 Indians, said the demonstration would have ended peacefully if the prime minister or other officials had come out to hear the protest.

"It was a pretty gutless thing for Trudeau to do. It would never have become violent if he had come out, and he knows it."

Meanwhile, Indian Affairs Minister Judd Buchanan was expected to announce that he would soon visit a number of reserves to see firsthand the conditions which led to the protest.

Sources said he will visit the Caughnawaga reserve south of Montreal and a number of reserves in the West.

The minister is also expected to tell the Commons that

Demonstrators Burn Cars

MONTREAL (CP) — About 45 officers were needed to quell a violent three-hour demonstration today at a strike-bound United Aircraft of Canada Ltd. plant in nearby Longueuil.

A spokesman for Longueuil police said officers from the municipal force and from Quebec Provincial Police were brought in after six cars were overturned and four of them burned during a demonstration by 300 to 400 persons.

The police spokesman said four or five persons were treated for slight injuries suffered during the demonstration but no arrests were made.

The demonstration followed a report made public Monday night which said there can be no mediated or negotiated settlement to the nine-month-old labor dispute between the company and 2,500 production workers at three United Aircraft plants on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River across from Montreal.

The report, prepared for Labor Minister Jean Cournoyer by mediator Pierre Dufresne, said the position of the two sides was "irreconcilable."

The dispute, which began last Jan. 7 when production workers walked off the job to back contract demands, has been marked by incidents of violence.

Several explosive devices have been set off near the plant, slightly damaging property, and several non-union employees who stayed on the job at United Aircraft have been beaten.

NEWS BRIEFS

Bomb Suspect Held

VANCOUVER (CP) — FBI investigators in Portland, Ore., are holding a suspect in last week's mail bombing in Winnipeg which blew off the hand of a court official.

An FBI spokesman said in a telephone interview from Portland that a 50-year-old man was turned over to U.S. immigration authorities after he was picked up Sunday.

African Miners Shot

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — The South African Press Association reports police opened fire on 300 battling African mine workers, killing two and injuring four.

The report says seven policemen were injured in the clash Sunday at a platinum mine at Marikana.

Police Kill Three

BUENOS AIRES (UPI) — Police in the industrial city of Cordoba killed three guarrillas, including a woman, today after the group opened fire on a patrol car, spokesmen said. Two policemen were wounded.

The incident in Cordoba, 400 miles northwest of Buenos Aires, was the first reported guerrilla action since a broad anti-subversion law went into effect today.

China Marks 25th

PEKING (Reuter) — China celebrated its 25th anniversary as a Communist state today, marked by a triumphant return to public life by Premier Chou En-lai.

Chou, fighting a bout of illness, made his first public appearance in two months when he spoke before more than 4,000 banquet guests in Peking's Great Hall of the People Monday night.

Guerillas Toughen

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Leftist guerrillas holding a U.S. woman diplomat and six other hostages in the Venezuelan consulate since last Friday suddenly hardened their position today in the slow-moving negotiations with U.S. and Dominican government authorities.

BLOCK BROS. EARNINGS UP

VANCOUVER (CP) — Net earnings of Block Bros. Industries Ltd. rose 37 per cent in the six months ended July 31 to $2,105,296 or 33 cents a share compared with $1,528,142 or 23 cents a share a year ago.

Chairman Arthur Block said in the report that volume of real estate sales fell sharply in the May-July period because of higher mortgage interest rates, credit tightening and higher unemployment.

Ford Will Testify On Pardon

WASHINGTON (UPI) — In a gesture not made by an American president for more than 100 years, President Ford has volunteered to testify before congressmen and answer questions about his pardon of Richard Nixon.

"This is to advise you that I expect to appear personally to respond to the questions raised . . .," Ford said in a three-sentence letter delivered to Rep. William L. Hungate (Dem.—Mo.), chairman of a house judiciary subcommittee on criminal justice. He offered to appear within 10 days.

It was more than the surprised congressmen had expected or asked.

Most recent presidents have asserted "executive privilege" to avoid giving information to congress — much less appear in person.

Nixon fought for that principle all through the Watergate scandal, saying he had to preserve the powers of the presidency.

The committee has before it two "resolutions of inquiry" asking Ford questions about the Nixon pardon granted three weeks ago. It was generally assumed that these would be written answers.

Bicycle Injuries Soar 308 Per Cent

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian Automobile Association (CAA) released a national survey Monday indicating a 308 per cent jump in bicycle injuries and deaths since 1970 and called on provincial governments to enact laws on bicycle equipment and operation.

The CAA said bicycle deaths rose to 28 in 1973 from 10 in 1970 and injuries increased to 2,174 from 704, and urged provincial governments to license bicycle riders and enact safety legislation.

It also urged municipal governments to co-operate in building bicycle paths to separate bicycles from motor vehicles.

Bicycle sales were 1.1 million in 1973 and are expected to reach 1.5 million this year, the association said. Before the bicycle boom began in 1971, annual sales were about 400,000.

But the association says bicycle manufacturers forecast sales will level off at about one million annually after this year.

The survey of 124 cities with populations ranging between 5,000 and 600,000 indicated that large cities are the safest cycling areas.

In cities with populations ranging between 25,000 and 100,000, the death-injury rate was five bicycle riders for every 10,000 people, considerably higher than the rate of 3.9 for cities between 100,000 and 200,000 people and 2.3 for communities over 200,000.

The CAA also discovered that:

Riders aged between five and 19 made up about 83 per cent of those killed and injured in 1973;

—more than 95 per cent of all bicycle deaths and injuries were from collisions with motor vechicles;

—An estimated 112,000 bicycles valued at $5.5 million were stolen in 1973.

TIMES NAMES NEW EDITOR

Stuart Underhill, publisher of the Victoria Times, announced today the appointment of George Oake as editor of the Times.

Born in Edmonton, Oake has a bachelor of arts degree from the University of Alberta and a journalism degree from Carleton University, Ottawa.

His seven years in newspapers began with general reporting for the Ottawa Journal and later, editorial writing there.

After freelance writing in Europe, Oake joined the Victoria Times in 1969 as an editorial writer and later served as city editor and features writer before returning to editorial writing.

Asked what he sees as the function of the editorial page, he said:

"I think it's to interpret and offer opinions on the community, the province and the world at a time when they are changing faster than at any other period in the history of mankind.

"An editor and an editorial page shouldn't necessarily accept the conventional wisdom. In a sense we're the leading edge in interpreting change to people and sometimes we should play the devil's advocate to encourage debate."

Throne Speech Shrugged Off

Times News Services

OTTAWA — Opposition leaders greeted Monday's throne speech with about the same enthusiasm they would reserve for a warmed-over version of yesterday's dinner.

"There was really nothing surprising in the speech," Conservative leader Robert Stanfield told reporters. I don't see anything that hasn't been mentioned before." (For details of the speech see Page 10.)

Ed Broadbent, New Democratic Party parliamentary leader, said the speech does not offer adequate approaches to the problem.

Despite the government's explicit promise not to generate slack in the economy, Broadbent said he saw signs in the speech that the government might do just that. He warned that such a policy would be "a very bad one" that would arouse the NDP's strongest opposition.

Social Credit leader Real Caouette said he has heard 16 throne speeches and Monday's seemed like "an exact copy" of the first one.

Spokesmen for business and labor in British Columbia, however, had praise for a few sections of the speech.

But they said the government's proposals for combatting inflation were vague and difficult to assess.
